'Will Not Suffer Reich to Be Insulted,' He Tells Bavarians.

Says Nazis Have No Plan for War

Gives First Statement on Grave Complications After Attack.

By the United Press.

Regensburg, Bavaria, June 6.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler tonight told a mass meeting of 150,000 Bavarian Nazis that, despite recent events in Spain, Germany has no intention of starting a war "either today, tomorrow or day after tomorrow."

Der Fuehrer's speech before the Bavarian mass meeting, celebrating the Nazi Party's organization in the East Bavarian district, was his first public statement on the grave complications in Spain that brought all Europe to the brink of open war a week ago.

He shouted a bold defense of the destruction of the Spanish loyalist seaport of Almeria by German warships—Germany's vengeance for the bombing of her pocket battleship Deutschland at Iviza, in the Balearic Islands.

"Germany will not suffer to be insulted or attacked," he said. "If someone thinks he may throw bombs on our ships, then we shall show him that we do not stand for such things.

"I read in the foreign newspapers that the bombing of Almeria damaged our reputation.

"I want to say this: People associating with notorious criminals are not qualified to be judges of our reputation.

"There is only one effective means against the Jewish-Bolshevist clique—to hit back when they attack."

Hitler's right-hand man, Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, commander in chief of the German air forces, told 66,000,000 Germans in a broadcast speech from Berlin last night that whenever German sovereignty is attacked "then the blood must flow."

Both he and Hitler, in their defenses of the Almeria bombardment, charged that the Spanish loyalists were being directed by Bolshevist Russia, the arch-enemy of Germany.

Der Fuehrer said that European disarmament was possible providing "the procedure is reversed this time."

"We have become suspicious, and the others must disarm first.

"But if the others desire to dispel this suspicion they can easily do so by giving the example and disarming.

"The German nation does not want to start a war, either today, tomorrow or the day after tomorrow. Germany's millions want to work in peace. They do not want to fight."

Britain Is Encouraged.

London, June 6 (AP).—The British government, a spokesman indicated today, considers the replies received yesterday from Italy and Germany as definitely encouraging hopes for early restoration of the international effort to isolate the Spanish civil war.

The Rome and Berlin replies—to Britain's three-point suggestion—were not published and official British comment was withheld, but it was authoritatively understood the British initiative to bring the two Fascist powers back into the non-intervention scheme had met with some success.

On Britain's third point, for consultation among all the control powers if a warship of any of them is fired on, it was indicated Italy and Germany had agreed "in principle" but with reservations. These apparently amounted to reserving the right to shoot first and consult afterward.

Authoritative opinion was that the chief task remaining for Foreign

'Sleuth at Home,' Hoover's Plea to Would-Be Aides

By the Associated Press.

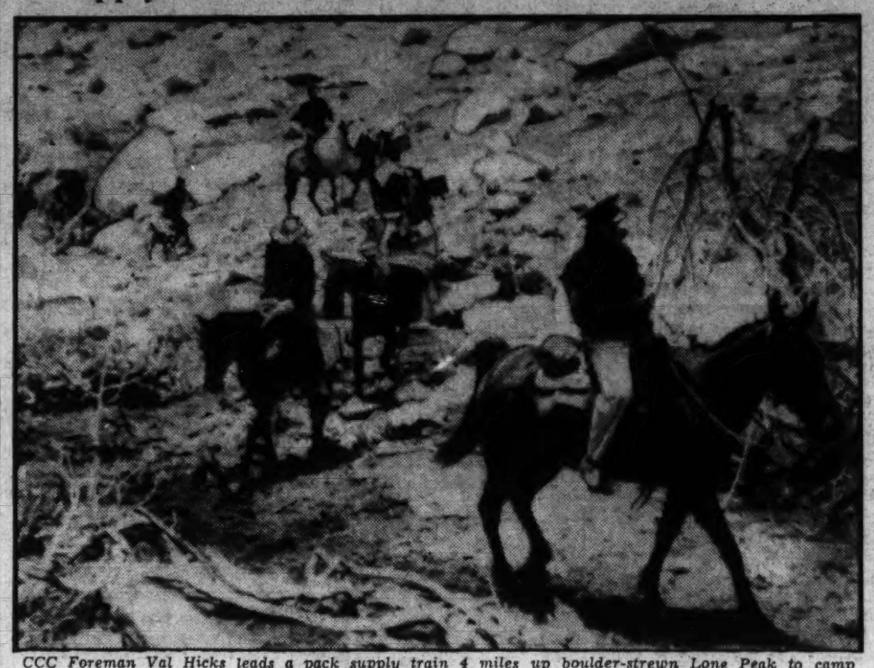
Amateur detectives are both a blessing and a hindrance to G-men in their search for kidnapers, bank robbers and other law violators.

J. Edgar Hoover, who heads all Justice Department Agents, praised some amateur detectives yesterday, but immediately voiced fervent hope correspondence-course sleuths "who go around wearing Sherlock Holmes hats" would do their sleuthing at home.

"Many clews furnished the Federal Bureau of Investigation have been of great value," Hoover said. "But it would be very dangerous to encourage would-be detectives. They would swamp us."

The best tip-offs given by civilians thus far have been the whereabouts of long-sought fugitives. Richard "Nick" Galatas, wanted in connection with the "Kansas City massacre," was "fingered" by an amateur sleuth, Hoover recalled, and Francis Leo Oley, sought in connection with the 1933 kidnaping of John J. O'Connell, jr., at Albany, N. Y., was recognized at Denver, Colo., by a young girl who had seen his picture in a detective story magazine.

Supply Train Climbs Four-Mile Peak in Plane Hunt



CCC Foreman Val Hicks leads a pack supply train 4 miles up boulder-strewn Lone Peak to camp from which search for missing plane was directed.

Lost Airliner Found Smashed In Mountains

By the Associated Press.

Alpine, Utah, June 6.—A huge Western Air express skyliner that vanished last December 15 with seven travelers in a mountain storm was found today smashed into "a million pieces" against a snow-drifted mountain peak. The bodies of its five men and two women occupants must be dug from drifts 25 to 50 feet deep.

Word of the end of the West's greatest air hunt was brought to this village, 25 miles south of Salt Lake City, by a breathless Civilian Conservation Corps enrolee, 18-year-old Reed Carter.

The discovery was made on Lake Hardy Ridge, 5 miles up a tortuous Wasatch Mountain trail from Alpine. The ridge is 35 miles east of the regular airline course. The craft was lost in rain and fog.

Four men, natives of this region, walked upon signs of the tragedy almost simultaneously at 8 a. m. today.

Officials said it might be days before bodies of the victims could be uncovered.

A report the plane "exploded" before it crashed into the mountain peak—only about 20 feet from the highest pinnacle—was discounted by the air line.

Ronald Dyche, of the National Forest Service, aiding in directing the hunt from a camp a mile and a half from the wreckage, said:

"If they had just been flying 25 feet higher they might have made it over the peak and possibly reached safety."

The first indication the end of the tragic hunt was near, said Carter, was when he found "an old stump I thought at first was a part of the plane."

Mail Bag Found.

Carter was with Rex Moyle, of Alpine.

"We were on the edge of a cliff 15 or 20 feet higher," Carter said, "so I lowered Rex on a rope. Before he got to the stump he picked up a mail bag. It was empty, but we knew where the letters that had been found had been coming from."

The search was concentrated in this wild region one week ago today after two Alpine ranchers picked up fragments of letters iden-

Manufacturers Trust Absorbs Equitable Co.

New York June 6 (AP).—The Manufacturers Trust Co. announced today that it had absorbed the Equitable Trust Co., of New York, which was founded in 1871 as the Traders Deposit Co.

Control of the company was acquired from trustees of the estate of Charles Hayden, who bought the stock from the Amerex Holding Co., successor to the Chase Corporation, in 1934.

All business of the Equitable will be conducted by the Manufacturers Trust Co. at its main office, 55 Broad street, beginning tomorrow, said Harvey D. Gibson, president.

32,000 Go to Zoo, 2 Collapse In Heat Wave; Street Explodes

2 Boats Capsize, Occupants Saved; Concrete Paving Buckled by Blast; Cloudy, Cooler Is Forecast for Today.

Thousands fled yesterday from Washington's heat wave to nearby beaches and boat clubs as the mercury rose steadily from a low of 73 at 6 a. m. to 90 at 3 p. m.

One boat capsized at the Capital Yacht Club. Another turned over off Hains Point. In both cases the occupants were quickly rescued.

The Zoo reported an attendance of 32,000. Five children were lost in the crowd, but all were soon restored to their families.

Two persons, made ill by the heat, were treated at their homes by Emergency Hospital physicians. One of them, Shefter Watts, 38, suffered a mild heart attack induced by the heat, according to the physician who treated him, and collapsed in the yard of his home at 2716 N street northwest. He suffered a cut on the head in the fall.

Fighting Flares In Nazi War on Catholic Faith

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 6.—Tension between the Nazi regime and the Roman Catholic Church flared into hand-to-hand fighting today.

Ten priests were arrested after clashes broke out in Munich while Chancellor Adolf Hitler warned the country he would not tolerate religious strife.

At the same time, Roman Catholic Church leaders replied spiritedly to Nazi charges of widespread immorality in their institutions.

The nation-wide Catholic celebration of the "Sunday of Youth" was the signal in Munich for organized demonstrations by detachments of the Hitler youth movement outside Catholic churches.

Priests retorted by leading processions of Catholic youths out of the churches and down the streets.

Jeering epithets called between the rival forces culminated in fighting. Several were injured.

The arrest of ten priests followed, boosting the total of week-end arrests in Munich to 11—Jesuit Father Rupert Mayer having been jailed yesterday on charges of delivering an antigovernment sermon.

Hitler, touching briefly on the church situation in a speech in Regensberg, declared:

"It is not God who divides us, but human beings. The Almighty has blessed our work, therefore it cannot be destroyed.

"No power within or without the Reich will keep us from going our way to our future."

Immorality Denied.

Crowded Catholic congregations heard their priests read from the pulpits a statement drafted by their leaders in answer to Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' accusation that the present wave of Catholic immorality trials is the worst in history.

It declared there are 25,635 priests

Four Men, Dog Start Long Vigil At North Pole

Moscow, June 6.—Four men and a dog were left alone on a drifting ice floe near the North Pole today to spend a year gathering scientific data to enrich Soviet knowledge of the top of the world.

The four airplanes of the Soviet Union's North Pole expedition took off at 3:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m., Saturday, E. S. T.) from the base camp established by the pathfinder plane, May 21, near the Pole.

Five and a half hours later three arrived at the expedition's base at Rudolf Island, 560 miles from the Pole. The fourth plane was down about halfway, but that was according to plan.

When the pilots decided they had not enough fuel to carry all back to Rudolf Island, the expedition leader, Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, directed that three should borrow gasoline from the fourth, A. I. Alexieff. All four planes started together and flew in convoy until they reached

Search Is Started For Man Who Sold His Wife for $20

Nevada City, Calif., June 6 (AP).—Sheriff's officers tonight launched a hunt for the husband of a woman who said she was sold for $20 to a burly woodsman who hugged her so tight he broke her ribs.

The woodsman, William Ebaugh, 29, was in jail while physicians examined and treated Mrs. Ray Delama, 39-year-old brunette, his asserted victim. Sheriff C. J. Tobiassen said Ebaugh admitted the "purchase," of Mrs. Delama from her husband, and said he wanted to question Delama about his alleged agreement.

The sheriff said Mrs. Delama declared her husband became "tired" of her three months ago and that she went to work for Ebaugh. She said her husband later approached Ebaugh and sold her for $20. She charged Ebaugh beat her when she resisted his advances. Deputy Sheriff William B. Woods said Ebaugh was an inmate of a State asylum several years ago.

2 Planes, Cutter Save Youth at Sea

Biloxi, Miss., June 6 (U.P.).—H. D. Pimberly, 21, of Galveston, Tex., was rushed to a hospital here tonight after two Coast Guard planes and a cutter had battled wind and rain to take him off the S. S. Pueblo in the Gulf of Mexico.

Radio messages summoned the Coast Guard cutter Legare after Pimberly became critically ill early today. Bucking winds and rain, Lieut. J. F. Harding piloted an amphibian to the Legare and took Pimberly aboard at 3:30 p. m. Poor visibility and the driving rain, however, forced Harding down. He radioed for a second amphibian. Pimberly was transferred to it and flown to the hospital here.

God Called Him to Wed Duke, Vicar Tells Crowd at Church

By the Associated Press.

Darlington, England, June 6.—Describing himself as "just a simple channel for God's will to be done," the Rev. R. Anderson Jardine tonight vigorously defended his action in performing the Anglican marriage service for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

A congregation that jammed the church heard him declare:

People came from all parts of northern England to attend the service; some arrived as early as 7 a. m. to be assured of seats.

Following the service, a movement was started to raise £5,000 (approximately $25,000) for the "poor man's parson" of Darlington in recognition of his action.

"What more does the church require than that any man and woman who are innocent parties should from the depth of their hearts ask for a religious service?" the vicar asked.

"Did not a gentler authority than any in the church say, 'He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone?' While the church banned and prohibited the clergy, history was being made at the Chateau de Cande. The wheels of Providence were moving, and I, a simple town parson, was destined by Almighty God to perform that simple ceremony. And all the powers of hell could not stop the wheels of God from turning and turning, turning as He commanded them to."

Keene's Auto Found; Adds To Mystery

Jack in Machine When Sold Is Still There, Police Reveal.

Finding Deepens Puzzle of Strange Death of Realty Man.

By Edward T. Folliard.

The automobile of Charles F. Keene was found yesterday by Headquarters Detectives Jeremiah Flaherty and Charles Carver. However, the finding of it served only to deepen the cloud of mystery over the 63-year-old real estate man's strange death, bolstering both the murder theory and the suicide theory, according to the point of view.

There was an automobile jack in Keene's car—the same jack that was in it when the new owner came into possession.

That cleared up one important point in the mystery: The automobile jack which, jammed into a brief case tied around Keene's neck, helped carry his body to the bottom of Chesapeake Bay, did not come from Keene's 1932 Nash.

The jack found in the brief case, of course, already had been identified by the manufacturer as part of the standard equipment of a 1935 Studebaker. Even so, if a jack had been missing from Keene's car, the suicide theory would have been strengthened.

Murder Theory Persists.

Until Keene can be linked in some way with the jack, the hammer and other articles found in the brief case the murder theory will persist.

Sergts. Flaherty and Carver, who were assigned to help Maryland officers on the Keene mystery by Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, learned that Keene sold his '32 Nash last February for $100, arranging to have the new owner pay off $92 still due on it. But after selling it, according to police, Keene told persons close to him that it had been wrecked on a nearby Maryland road.

To those who lean to the suicide theory, this further showed (1) that Keene needed money badly, and (2) his intimates did not know as much about his affairs as they thought. Why did he broadcast the idea that the car had been wrecked?

Sergt. Flaherty reported to Inspector Thompson that the man who bought Keene's car said it showed no evidence of having been in a wreck.

Mystery Deepened.

Whence came the automobile jack? Was it taken from one of the many machines on the Norfolk night boat from which Keene disappeared May 14, the loaded brief case around his neck and a bullet in his brain? Thus far, no owner of an automobile that was on the boat has reported the loss of a jacket. But motorists sometimes go for months, even years, without needing a jack.

A check-up on the owner of all automobiles aboard the District of Columbia on her fateful trip is essential, in the opinion of some investigators.

They think it would be wise, too, to have the Navy check up on the knot found in the rope which held the brief case to Keene's neck. Fishermmen at Crisfield, Md., where the body was taken after being found in the bay, said it must have been tied by an expert. The widow of Keene says he couldn't even tie a bundle.

Edward Reed, of 923 I street northwest, celebrated his sixty-eighth birthday yesterday by talking with his friends. Somehow, the news reached police that the Keene case was mentioned in the conversation and Reed was picked up by an officer from the First Percinct.

Reed, who told The Post that in all his 68 years he had not run afoul of the police until last night, was held for investigation at the police station for two hours and then released. He described conditions in the cell block of the station as a "disgrace" and added that if the police arrest everyone who talks about the mystery they will have no time to direct traffic or write out traffic tickets.

Steel Strike Is Forcing Layoff of Thousands, B. and O. Warns Davey

J. Ham Lewis, Once Suspended At Virginia, Chides Her Critics

J. HAMILTON LEWIS.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis was angry yesterday, and for the courtly, seldom-ruffled gentleman from Illinois that is a rare emotion. He was angry because he felt his alma mater, the 116-year-old University of Virginia, had been slandered.

Life Magazine, in its latest issue, said the University of Virginia boys are "indisputably among the ablest college drinkers in the country." Senator Lewis let that pass; indeed, he even admitted he once had been suspended for drinking.

But when Life went on to say that Virginia, except for its law school, was not a top-ranking university and that serious-minded Virginians had to go North for an education, Alumnus J. Ham Lewis went to the mat.

"It is well known," he said, "that Student Lewis, along with some others, was charged with drinking and was suspended. But at the time that this peccadillo was transpiring, the universities of Europe were certifying the University of Virginia as being outstanding among all the schools of America in the fields of medicine and science."

Sectional prejudice was blamed by Senator Lewis for Life's harsh judgment on the University of Virginia, and there was an implication he suspected a Harvard, Yale or Princeton man.

If it was a Harvard man, he got just what was coming to him as Senator Lewis, from force of long habit, allowed politics to creep into his indignation.

"Whatever might be the strictures cast on the University of Virginia," he said in a ringing voice, "it has never been accused of having its professors and its students descend to the offense of hissing the President of the United States, nor of insulting him after he had been the guest of the college."

He was referring to President Roosevelt's visit to Harvard's tercentenary celebration during the campaign year of 1936.

"Undergraduates hissed him along the street," Senator Lewis indignantly recalled, "hissed him merely because of what they had read concerning his policies. And eminent professors in the college insulted him because they represented the old Tory order of 100 years ago."

Agencies Free Of Presidential Control Urged

By Russell Smith.

Independent boards and commissions of the Federal Government should be maintained free from Presidential control lest their "newer social policies be the fooball of politics," the Brookings Institution advised the select Senate Committee on Reorganization in a report made public yesterday.

The institution in the same report recommended numerous revisions in functions of some independent agencies, the effect of many of which would be to expand greatly jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission. Transfer of the Air Commerce Bureau, now in the department, to the Interstate Commerce Commission, also was advised, at least so far as the bureau's regulatory functions are involved.

The observations of the institution, disclosed by Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, chairman of the committee, constituted two chapters of its findings in an investigation undertaken for the committee. Other findings have been published previously. In its discussion of the relationship of the independent agencies to the President, the institution said, Byrd reported:

"In case the independent boards and commissions were placed within executive departments there undoubtedly would be strong control established over sub-legislative and administrative activities of the regulatory authorities.

"Arguments for centralization in the President apply in almost equal degree to the proposal to give con-

Senator Indicts Alcohol as Chief Hindrance to World Peace.

To expect a world addicted to drink to understand the significance of world peace or to act with sufficient unity and ability to accomplish such is to expect the illogical, Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, declared yesterday afternoon at the sixteenth triennial convention of the World's W. C. T. U.

Senator Sheppard was co-sponsor for the national prohibition law and on each January 16 since the eighteenth amendment was adopted in 1920 has made a speech in the Senate condemning the use of alcoholic beverages.

Speaking at the open-air peace rally staged by the union at Sylvan Theater, he linked war and beverage alcohol as chief enemies of mankind and termed both "agencies of destruction."

"A terrible indictment stands against beverage alcohol in every country on the globe. Among almost every people it is one of the principal sources of the murders, suicides and debaucheries of body and mind."

"It ought to be outlawed, disowned, destroyed in every nation of the world," he said. "It is undermining the moral conceptions and physical capacity of the populations of the earth."

Harry N. Holmes, of New York City, associate secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, who appeared on the same program, said, "By its frenzied rearmament, the world of our generation seems to be defying and repudiating the

350 Excursionists Marooned on D.C. Steamer; Towed to Quantico by Tug, Return by Bus

The excursion steamer Potomac, with 350 Washingtonians aboard, broke down yesterday when an "arm" connected to her paddle wheel struck a piece of debris in the river and cracked. The accident happened around noon, 10 miles below Quantico, Va.

The 350 man, women and children were bound for Colonial Beach, 70 miles down the Potomac River from Washington, fleeing from one of the hottest days the city has experienced this year. They never got to Colonial Beach.

Instead the passengers "killed time" for several hours as best they could while the Potomac lay at anchor.

Some of the passengers lolled on deck. Others went down to the ballroom to dance to the music of Grafton Nicholas nine-piece orchestra, or listened to Arch McDonald broadcast over the radio how Washington was beating Cleveland in a 10-inning game.

But the great majority must have spent their time longing for the beach and the cooling surf at Colonial Beach.

There was plenty of food and refreshments aboard.

The Potomac, which is operated by the Potomac River Line, left the Seventh street wharf at 9 a. m. She was scheduled to dock at Colonial Beach at 1 p. m., and then to start back at 4 with a prospect of arriving here about 8 or 8:30 p. m.

The 350 returned to Washington by bus. The Potomac was towed to Quantico by a Navy tug which was sent to her aid when word of the accident reached the office of the Potomac River line. This word came from Donald Hotaling, assistant engineer, who went ashore in a small boat and telephoned for help after the breakdown.

The Potomac reached Quantico in tow shortly before 9 p. m. It was docked there and the passengers were loaded on buses in which they rode out the remainder of their excursion—back to Washington.

The passengers arrived in Washington last night between 11:30 and midnight. All seemed to take the disappointment philosophically; in fact, they apparently rather enjoyed the stir their misfortune had created.

The Potomac Line operates another excursion steamer—the Southport. Had this been available yesterday it would have been sent to take off the passengers of the Potomac. As it was, the Southport had been engaged to take a party of Senators and Representatives to Indian Head. She left here an hour after the Potomac. Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, and Representative William M. Colmer, of Mississippi, were the hosts.

Officials of the Potomac River Line said the Potomac might have continued on after the breakdown, but that Capt. Philip Barbour thought it safer to drop anchor.

Rail Firm Reports Wide Damage in Ohio's 'State of Riot.'

Roosevelt Action Sought by Unions

C. I. O. Leaders Hold 2 Rallies; Shots Fired at Republic Plant.

On the Labor Front.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad protested to Gov. Davey of Ohio that interference with railroad operations by steel strikers had created "a state of riot."

President Roosevelt's intervention to bring a peaceful end to the far-flung steel strike was asked by a grievance committee representing 86 steel union locals.

Steel Anarchy.

Cleveland, June 6.—The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad protested today to Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio that interference with railroad operations by steel strikers has created, "to all intents and purposes, a state of riot."

"We are substantial taxpayers in the State of Ohio and, as such, entitled to the protection of the State in the peaceful pursuit of our business," Vice President C. W. Galloway, of B. & O., telegraphed to Davey. "We earnestly implore you to immediately take such action as will restore our property to our peaceful possession and enable us to fulfill our obligations as common carriers."

Galloway said property of the Baltimore & Ohio and other railroads serving the Youngstown-Warren-Niles, Ohio, steel district "is being damaged and destroyed by removal of rails from the tracks and other misconduct."

To Lay Off Thousands.

He added that because of the shortage of materials arising from the steel and other strikes, the railroads would furlough "several thousand men" tomorrow.

Interference and alleged interference with railrod, postal and airplane deliveries to besieged mills has become a point of major controversy in the C. I. O.-sponsored steel strike that has made idle some 70,000 employes of the Republic, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Inland Companies.

The B. & O., Pennsylvania and Erie Railroads have sued for a permanent injunction to restrain the Steel Workers Union from interfering with operations. A hearing on this application will be held in Federal court here in midweek.

Republic Uses Planes.

The Republic Steel Corporation considered the possibility of attempting legal action to compel the Postoffice Department to accept packages of food, clothing and newspapers for delivery to mills at Warren and Niles, where the company says 2,600 men are working.

Republic has continued delivering food to the Warren and Niles plants by airplane.

The union called the strike on May 26, demanding signed contracts with the three companies. The companies stood fast in their determination not to sign. No apparent progress was made by would-be mediators.

A. F. L., C. I. O. in New Fight.

Portland, Oreg., June 6 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization squared off today for a fight over control of 100,000 woodworkers and 40,000 maritime men.

Delegates to the conventions of the Federation of Woodworkers and the Maritime Federation of the Pacific, both opening here tomorrow, were expected to hear recommendations for C. I. O. affiliation. The woodworkers now belong to the A. F. L. Most of the seven big maritime unions in the Maritime Federation belong to the A. F. L. also, but some of them already have moved to desert.

10 Week-Ends in Jail.

Princeton, N. J., June 6 (U.P.).—Thomas O'Kane, 37, will be arrested once a week for the next ten weeks for disorderly conduct. A policeman will meet him Friday night when he comes from work and escort him to jail until the following Monday morning. The sentence of ten week-ends in jail was imposed after O'Kane told Magistrate Kenneth Stevens he had a wife and four children and would lose his job if he went to jail for 30 days.

Interest Rate On U. S. Bonds At 3-Year High

$400,000,000 of $800,000,000 Offering to Bear 1¾ Per Cent.

An $800,000,000 offering of Treasury notes announced yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., for June 15, will include $400,000,000 bearing 1¾ per cent interest, the highest rate paid by the Government in three years.

Of the $800,000,000, but $300,000,000 will be used to retire special Treasury bills maturing nine days following the issue. The remaining $500,000,000 of proceeds will bolster the Treasury's working balance, with the exception of $157,000,000 interest on the public debt. The heavy inflow of foreign gold has drained the Treasury of $800,000,000 since January 1 in the "sterlization" purchase program.

The increase in the interest rate follows the action several weeks ago of the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee in determining to go into the market for United States securities, which had shown weakness at the time the committee's decision was made.

The 1¾ per cent interest rate, applicable to half of the offerings announced yesterday, was the highest since an issue sold in June, 1934. These latter were five-year notes which yielded 1¼ per cent interest, whereas the 1¾ per cent notes are to run for four years and nine months.

Morgenthau Silent.

Secretary Morgenthau set the rates after consultation with the Federal Reserve Board. He made no comment yesterday on the rate increase but was represented as believing the rates are the "correct" levels in the present situation.

It was not made clear yesterday in the Treasury announcement to what extent foreign gold inflow has made it necessary to add to the working balance. The $343,000,000 approximate balance to be netted from the new issues, after retirement of expiring maturities and payment of debt interest, will become part of this general working fund.

It is known, however, that the purchase of foreign gold has caused serious and continuously increasing outlays in recent weeks.

This purchase program was undertaken in order to segregate and impound the imported gold for fear of its inflationary effect if no action were taken.

Statement by Treasury.

In its announcement yesterday, the Treasury said in part:

"Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau is today offering for subscription, at par and accrued interest, through the Federal Reserve banks, $800,000,000, or thereabouts, Treasury notes in two series, each for $400,000,000, or thereabouts. Both series will be dated and bear interest from June 15, 1937. One series, designated Series D-1939, will bear interest at the rate of 1¾ per cent, and will mature in two years and three months on September 15, 1939. The other series, designated Series A-1942, will bear interest at the rate of 1¾ per cent, and will mature in four years and nine months on March 15, 1942. The notes will not be subject to call for redemption prior to maturity.

"The Treasury notes will be accorded the same exemptions from taxation as are accorded other issues of Treasury notes now outstanding. The notes will be issued only in bearer form with coupons attached, in the denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000 and $100,000.

"Subscriptions will be received at the Federal Reserve banks and branches, and at the Treasury Department, Washington. Banking institutions generally may submit subscriptions for account of customers, but only the Federal Reserve banks and the Treasury Department are authorized to act as official agencies.

"Subscriptions from banks and trust companies for their own account will be received without deposit, but will be restricted in each case and for each series to an amount not exceeding one-half of the combined capital and surplus of the subscribing bank or trust company. Subscriptions from all others must be accompanied by 10 per cent of the amount of notes applied for * * *"

Boy, 16, and Bride, 15, Admit Holdup Series

Valentine, Nebr., June 6 (AP).—County Attorney Bryan Quigley said Donald Blake, 16, and his 15-year-old bride, Evelyn, Painesville, Ohio, high school students, arrested near Johnstown, Nebr., Friday night, had signed confessions they perpetrated a series of holdups in four Western States.

Blake and his bride, who said they were married at Eaton, Colo., were arrested after they held up a filling station here, Quigley said. An officer was grazed by a bullet when gunplay on the part of the girl figured in the capture, Quigley added.

New Faces in Congress

Young Congressman From Ohio An Ardent G. O. P. Supporter

REPRESENTATIVE DUDLEY A. WHITE.

Dudley Allen White Advocates 'Common Sense' Policy, Opposes Court 'Meddling;" Is Typical Self-Made Man.

By Liam Lenihan.

A few minutes conversation with tall, youthful looking Dudley Allen White, of Ohio, would convince even a neophyte in psychology that he has a mission in life.

The mission has to do with the rejuvenation of the Republican Party, which White represents in Congress. Not that the G. O. P. needs face-lifting in a mental sense, he declared. All it needs is a sufficient dramatization of "its forward-looking position on a lot of things" to prevent a 1940 repetition of the debacle of '36.

"The Republican Party has always been the party of advance," he declared. "It nurtured the first forward-looking measures in the social and economic field. But its efforts have never been dramatized, its leaders have never gone to the effort of producing and presenting its program in a constructive, concrete way."

The G. O. P., White feels, should take a "common sense" position—it should never label its program as left wing or right. "Conservative and liberal are misleading terms," he said. "What we should seek is an analysis of what is wrong and what is right."

Biographical sketch: Born in New London, Huron County, Ohio; shined shoes, sold pop corn at an early age; went into the dry goods business, then manufacturing, and finally became editor and general manager of the Reflector-Herald, Norwalk, Ohio. He served in the United States Navy during the World War; now holds a commission in the United States Naval Reserve. Was delegate to the 1928 Republican National Convention in Kansas City and alternate at Chicago in 1932. He is also a bank director and vice president of Sandusky Newspapers, Inc., Sandusky, Ohio.

Representative White is emphatically opposed to any Supreme Court meddling by the President. If change is necessary, it should come about by constitutional amendment, he declared. He denied he is an "alarmist," however, or that the country is going to pot. "I have too much faith in the average American's do-or-die belief in democracy," he said.

Shorts: White recently introduced a resolution that would exclude defaulting nations from reciprocal trade agreements unless they made arrangements to honor their war debts. He also will propose a compromise on the child labor amendment, excluding agricultural workers from the provisions of the act.

"Rex and I then started along both sides of the canyon (apparently over Lake Hardy Ridge) and soon we began to find splintered pieces of the plane, and then where most of the plane seems to be. It is in a pocket where snow must be 25 to 50 feet deep. The bodies must be buried very deep. * * * It may take five or six days to recover them.

Within a few minutes of the time Moyle and Carter reached the cliff, two other searchers working out of the camp, Melvin Devey and Emery Andrews, appeared. Moyle remained while the three others ran almost the entire distance back to camp.

By the Associated Press.

The ship disappeared before dawn of last December 15 en route from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City.

The airliner left Los Angeles at 11:15 p. m., Pacific standard time, Monday night, December 14. It was due in Utah's mountain-hemmed capital at 4:10 a. m. mountain time, next morning.

But—after a routine radio report from the pilot that he was over Milford, Utah, at 3:27 a. m., December 15—no more was heard. Milford is 180 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Hours later early-rising ranchers and villagers of 25 to 40 miles south of Salt Lake City reported hearing a plane "that sounded as if it were in trouble" struggling through the murk and rain before dawn.

While playing with his brother, Harry, 6, he slipped and fell, police said. He was treated for minor bruises and possible fracture of the skull.

in Germany and only 58 are involved in immorality charges—"less than one-fourth of 1 per cent, or one priest in every 500."

Goebbels delivered his accusation in a speech May 28 in reply to an anti-Nazi speech by George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago.

Sermons today in some instances also indirectly touched on the immorality trial situation and pamphlets defending the church position were sold at church doors.

At St. Hedwig's Cathedral, in Berlin, the sermon was based on the Parable of the Lost Sheep, and stressed that the function of the church is not to drive a sinner from the fold, but to bring him back repentant.

A pamphlet distributed at the door reminded believers that the church in its long history repeatedly had been disturbed by scandal.

Despite the precautions of ecclesiastical authorities, it said, unqualified persons sometimes become priests or members of religious orders, "sometimes merely because it (the church) offered a secure existence—a thought which doubtless exerted powerful influence during the economic distress, unemployment and professional difficulties of the postwar years."

Neo-Pagan Hits "Hypocrites."

The fact there were scandals to trouble the church, it said, therefore was not so startling as the manner in which they are exploited as a weapon against the church.

"Yes, perhaps there has never been a time in all church history," the pamphlet said, "whe scandals have been exploited in such boundless and such unscrupulous manner as in recent months by the anti-Christian press."

Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, No. 1 Nazi philosopher, leader of a neo-pagan movement and editor, spoke of "churchly hypocrites" at a mass meeting near Hanover.

He asked those whom he called the "churchly hypocrites" how they expected to get anywhere raising disturbances against the Nazi regime when, he charged, they did not dare to send the faithful into the streets against the postwar Communist mobs.

Britain, France Urged to Resist Fascist Threat

Foreign Policy Group's Report Says Democracies Could Win in War.

By the Associated Press.

The Foreign Policy Association said yesterday that Great Britain and France could defeat Germany and Italy if the Spanish situation led to a European war.

A report, written by David H. Popper, of the association's research staff, suggested that a frank declaration by the democracies that they would stand together against the Fascist states "would be more successful in diminishing the likelihood of a European conflict" than present policies.

"The superior strategic position of Britain and France in the Mediterranean," Popper said, "enables these states, if they will, to inaugurate a policy of firm resistance to the Fascist countries in the Spanish crisis.

"Unless they can win a war in Europe within a relatively short period—a contingency most military experts consider highly unlikely—Germany and Italy will be subjected to the pressure of Anglo-French sea power which still can sweep enemy commerce from the outer oceans.

May Be Decisive Factor.

"Despite the drive for national self-sufficiency in the dictatorships, this factor may prove decisive in a long war.

"Under present conditions a European war would almost certainly find France at the side of Britain, while Germany might possibly join Italy. In such a case the democracies would enjoy unquestioned superiority in navies and bases, together with at least parity in the air.

"The defensive organizations of the two nations are complementary to a notable degree. Britain's 'home fleet' may command the Eastern Atlantic and the North Sea, while France concentrates its naval forces, including its formidable new cruiser, destroyer and submarine flotillas, in the western Mediterranean.

Can't Lose Advantages.

"The democratic states are in a position to utilize their strategic and diplomatic advantage to carry out a policy of firm resistance to Fascist ambitions. * * * A clear decision on this point by Britain and France would greatly contribute to the general political and economic settlement which they now are trying to negotiate in Europe.

"If efforts to reach a comprehensive agreement are successful it will be because Germany and Italy are convinced that they have more to gain by peaceful negotiation than by an advanturous diplomatic and military policy.

"Should a settlement prove impossible, however, Britain and France can ill afford to dissipate their advantages by retreating step by step before the offensive of Mussolini and Hitler."

Elizabeth Cates In Piano Recital

Miss Elizabeth Cates, presented by Mme. Marie von Unschuld, gave a piano recital last night at the Women's City Club ballroom before a large and appreciative audience.

In all her playing she showed a clear, brilliant technique. A careful working out of intricate details, a fine understanding of phrasing and eagerness of portraying the compositions as to their composers' poetical ideas were noticed throughout.

The program included Sonata Opus 13, Beethoven; Ballade G Minor, Chopin; Etude C Minor Opus 10, No. 12, Chopin; Etude G Flat Major Opus 25, No. 9, Chopin; Un Sospiro, Liszt; waltz, "Artists' Life," Strauss; Rhapsodie No. 13, Liszt.

Puerto Rico Pay Law Halts 75,000 Needles

San Juan, Puerto Rico, June 6 (AP).—Needle workers of Puerto Rico—some 75,000 of them—will not take up their needles tomorrow.

The industry will be shut down as a result of employers' decisions not to take chances with the old minimum wage law of $1 daily, held enforceable as a result of the recent Supreme Court decision. Labor Commissioner Rivera Martinez held that the law applies to home as well as factory labor. The needlework association telegraphed Acting Gov. Menendez Ramos urging government action to clear up the law so the industry, second largest in the island, might know what prospects it has for continuing.

Congress Faces Difficult Week As Bills Pile Up

Early Adjournment Fades as Long Delay Looms on Roosevelt Plans.

By the Associated Press.

A week of intensive work stretched before Congress yesterday as it swung into a drive for an adjournment still far in the future.

President Roosevelt's enumeration of bills which he would prefer be enacted at this session added to potential controversies, any one of which might last for weeks or months.

Several legislators, speaking privately, said some portion of the program would have to be postponed if this session is not to run continuously into the next, beginning in January.

Of first importance, as an adjournment obstacle at least, was the President's bill for the reorganization of the Supreme Court. Bitter-end oppositionists have threatened to filibuster any compromise proposal to the point of physical exhaustion.

Other Proposals.

Other tems of the list were the establishment of wage and hour standards for interstate industries, anti-tax dodging measures, reorganization of the executive branch of the Government, helping farm tenants to become farm owners, conservation of soil, water and power resources and the razing of slums and building of modern low-cost housing.

This list furnished the subject matter for essential portions of the week's program.

The Senate and House Labor committees, in joint session, will continue their hearings on the wage-hour bill, with John L. Lewis, leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization, as their principal witness.

A majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee, opposed to the court reorganization bill, was at work on a report recommending that the Senate reject the measure.

Modified Tenancy Bill.

A sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Agriculture contemplated a modified farm tenancy bill. Members said it would be completed in a few days.

Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas, the majority leader, personally was overseeing the preparation of a revised Government reorganization bill, intended to compose some of the disputes that problem has aroused.

Tomorrow the House will consider the Senate-approved resolution to create a joint Congressional committee to investigate the stratagems by which citizens and corporations escape the payment of income taxes.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee will resume its investigation of railroad financing tomorrow. The treaties which resulted from last winter's Pan-American Conference were down on the Wednesday calendar of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Hard Work for House.

The flood control committee begins hearings today on an emergency project for the lower Ohio Basin; the Interstate Commerce Committee will commence hearings tomorrow on a proposed Government loan for the private construction of two commercial dirigibles; the Agriculture Committee will hear the suggestions of State officials on farming legislation, and the Judiciary Committee continues hearings on a bill to revise the bankruptcy laws.

In the House chamber, in addition to the tax-dodger investigation, a two-year extension of the Public Works Administration comes up for consideration today and the extension of nuisance taxes on Thursday.

A Senate sub-committee will complete hearings on relief appropriations for next year today, with the hope it can report its recommendations to the Senate late in the week.

More NaziChildren Is Goebbels' Plea

Frankfort on the Main, Germany, June 6 (AP).—One of the Nazi regime's proudest achievements is reversal of the "terrible" Clemenceau doctrine that "there are 20,000,000 too many Germans," Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels said today.

He addressed a national gathering of 30,000 parents of large families.

The postwar German republic, Goebbels said, took the "insult" lying down, "but for us there are not too many, but too few Germans in the world. * * * Our population increase is a revolt against creeping national death. The only growing nations are young nations, and only young nations can in the last analysis survive."

Then Alexieff burrowed downward through the clouds and found a landing place on the ice where he will wait until fuel can be flown to him from Rudolf Island.

Dr. Schmidt after reaching the island radioed Moscow:

"All work of arranging our polar station having been finished, the official opening was held at 2 o'clock this morning under a bright polar sun. A short meeting was completed with the raising of the red flag and cheers for Stalin.

"Then we left the Pole with a feeling of joy, but at the same time with regret, for the Pole has been hospitable to the Soviet expedition.

"Spirin (the navigator) directed the squadron directly to Rudolf Island. The weather was changeable and the landing field hidden by fog, but when a break in the clouds disclosed the Rudolf base the three planes landed.

"Alexieff reported by radio he was unable to land exactly on the eighty-fifth parallel because the ice was unsatisfactory. He cruised about and found a satisfactory floe and made a landing. His crew already has prepared a field for a take-off, to be made as soon as we can send him fuel."

The four planes are to return to Moscow as soon as Alexieff rejoins the others and the weather is favorable.

The four who stayed behind were Ivan Papinin, veteran of the Arctic and leader of the group; Ernest Krenkel, radio operator, who went to the Antarctic with Admiral Richard E. Byrd in 1929; Pyotr Shirsof, hydrobiologist, and Eugene Federoff, magnetologist.

During their year at "the birthplace of weather," the four will live in a specially constructed fur and eiderdown-lined hut and eat specially concentrated foods.

A blizzard was developing as the quartet began their long vigil. Temperature was 24.8 above zero Fahrenheit.

The camp, originally located within 13 miles of the Pole, had drifted away to 88 degrees 50 minutes north, 25 degrees west, about 75 miles from the pole.

Burglars Go to Work During Vacation Time

New York, June 6 (AP).—Leaving on your vacation soon? Well, don't notify all the burglars in your vicinity your home will be vacant for two or three weeks, advised William D. Clark, insurance executive, today.

Drawn window shades, for example, yell to the passing prowler that the family's out of town, he explained, and newspapers and milk piling up on the doorstep are an open invitation to thieves.

So, said Clark, leave the shades at half mast; stop milk, ice and paper deliveries; put deadlocks on all doors—springlocks are easy for an expert; install secure window fasteners; remove all valuables, and notify the police when you leave and return.

Drastic Slash In U.S. Housing Bill Predicted

By the Associated Press.

Informed Administration officials predicted yesterday the $1,000,000,000 Wagner slum clearance bill will be revamped to provide outlays of only a few million dollars in the next fiscal year.

Although approving the principle of slum clearance, Secretary Morgenthau raised vigorous objections to the bill when it was introduced several months ago, contending huge expenditures for housing would further delay attainment of a balanced budget.

Since then, Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, and Treasury officials have conferred on methods for financing the program. Wagner discussed the proposal with President Roosevelt last week, saying afterward a compromise satisfactory to all would be worked out shortly.

Program Placed Ahead.

As now drawn, the Wagner bill would appropriate $51,000,000 to a Federal housing authority for the fiscal year beginning July 1. In addition, the authority would have power to issue $1,000,000,000 of Government - guaranteed obligations over a period of years. Proceeds from the security issues would go for slum clearance loans and grants to local authorities.

Officials said yesterday a proposed $51,000,000 appropriation probably would be kept to only a few millions, and that the projected authority to issue securities either would be sharply reduced or eliminated entirely.

Detailed Study Planned.

They added that emphasis will be placed upon encouraging municipalities and political subdivisions to undertake slum clearance themselves, relieving the Federal Government of any heavy expenditures.

During the next fiscal year, it was said, activities probably will center upon study of housing needs and upon assisting local groups in planning slum clearance programs.

Under the compromise, officials said, the way would be left open for Congress to make appropriations from year to year, permitting expansion of Federal activities later if this can be done without upsetting the budget.

'Comfort' Cult Is Assailed at Georgetown U.

Under historic trees, Georgetown University's 138th graduating class yesterday afternoon received diplomas, degrees and the farewell blessing of its alma mater, the oldest Catholic University in the United States.

Seniors, faculty men, parents and friends assembled on a campus, threatened in the early part of the exercises with rain, and took part in traditional ceremonies that were started off with an academic procession.

Dr. Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham University, who received his diploma from Georgetown 24 years ago, returned to the scene of his college days to receive the honorary degree of doctor of literature, and to make the 1937 commencement oration.

Dr. Gannon warned the graduates against "the pessimism of the times." He charges that whole most up-to-date educators are talking about character and the training of the whole man, "the typical modern university is educating unto despair."

"It (the typical modern university) is teaching its students, implicity and explicity, that man's end in life—if he has any—is his own health culture and comfort."

This is not enough, the speaker declared. If there is nothing but "health culture and comfort" only a few men can ever hope for even a shadow of happiness," he said.

"Prodigal sons are out of date," said Dr. Gannon. "It is the Judas Iscariots we admire today. Judas was a modern. He was a realist."

In the face of troublesome times, Catholics are optimists, the speaker declared, because they "can see through trouble to something beyond."

In the absence of the Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of the university, now ill, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of the university, presided, and in his opening address reminded the graduates that they are the "bearers of a high and noble tradition—the youngest heirs of an ancient lineage.

Pioneer Spirit Praised.

"You are the academic descendants of sturdy pioneers whose brains and brawn and character contributed mightily to the precious freedom of spirit and civil liberty which we enjoy in this favored land."

Col. esse C. Drain, commandant of the military department, presented candidates for commmissions in the R. O. T. C., as follows:

Debt Reduced At American U., Says Christie

Broader Programs Set in 2 Departments, Trustees Told.

American University trustees today will be advised that the school's debt has been substantially reduced, that a new physical education program is ready for next year and that a new program of social sciences is to be launched in the College of Liberal Arts. The board meets at Battle Memorial Library on the campus, under leadership of Dr. Arthur C. Christie, president of the board.

The school's development program, raising $250,000 here as part of $2,000,000 from the Nation, will swing into another week's campaign with a luncheon report meeting at the Willard Hotel today at 12:30 p. m.

Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of the university, in his annual baccalaureate sermon at Metropolitan Methodist Church, adjacent to the campus, yesterday afternoon warned a "dictatorship can be created overnight, and be bequeathed from generation to generation;" called on graduates to support the "growth" of democracy, and fight to save it.

Richard Hummer, president of the graduating class of the college, presented to Dr. George B. Woods, dean of the college, the class gift to the school, a new system of illumination for the assembly hall, and several reproductions of famous paintings for the same hall.

Commencement exercises will take place at the Memorial Continental Hall of the D. A. R. on Seventeenth street tonight at 8 p. m. Ernest K. Lindley, Washington correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, will deliver the commencement address. Chancellor Gray will present the diplomas.

Dean Powell Extolls Faith To Graduates

Source of Our Power, He Says at Baccalaureate Services.

From the religious element called faith comes man's vast inheritance, and from the power produced by faith have resulted the progress and achievement of man, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington, told George Washington University graduates assembled last night for baccalaureate services in Washington Cathedral.

"Only a moment's thought will show that we live, not by sight or knowledge, but by faith," he said. "In our homes, amongst our friends and in our business we are able to continue our life only as we exercise faith. And this is true because faith tells us that things are not what, at first sight, or even when put to wonderful purposes, just what they then seem to be. Here is the basis of all our natural science—a religious thing. It matters not at all how a nonreligious person may seek to explain or explain away. The fact still remains that it is this element of faith in religion that makes possible all our scientific advances.

"To a man without faith, stone is just stone, but to one who has faith, it is more than just stone, it is a record of the ages and the powers and the processes of nature. To a man without faith, pigment is just coloring matter, but to the man with faith, it is an opportunity for him to express, so that others can see, his sense of the beautiful. This is true, because faith has said that these materials are not just what they appear to be, but have other and hidden meanings."

The services were held in the great choir of the cathedral, where the graduates gathered in cap and gown. The president of the university, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, read the lesson. Members of the University Glee Club composed the choir.

The President and Mrs. Marvin will give a reception this afternoon at the Washington Club for the graduates and parents. Fraternities and sororities will hold a "sing" tonight in the university yard. Also scheduled for tonight is the initiation banquet of the Order of the Coif, legal honor society. Class night exercises will take place Tuesday night in the yard, and the following night degrees will be conferred at the 116th commencement in Constitution Hall.

Value of Ideals Is Stressed at HowardService

University's President Tells Graduates to Labor Whole-Heartedly.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, preached the baccalaureate sermon to graduates of the nine schools and colleges of Howard University at a campus service held in front of Frederick Douglass Memorial Hall. The service inaugurated the university's sixty-eighth annual commencement exercises. These will be concluded Friday, when Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States commissioner of Education, will deliver the commencement address.

Pointing out to the graduates the various ideals which had been cultivated during their collegiate training, Dr. Johnson urged them, in their future work, to listen to those ideals.

"There is a tendency, in institutions of learning," he said, "to let the president of the college and the dean of men and women look after the morals of the institution, as well as its constructive policies. But the pioneer people whom you shall serve need men and women who are wrapped up, body and soul, in the whole development of these institutions.

"Do the thing that needs to be done. Be among those men and women of your institution's faculty who love youth, and who let themselves out to the uttermost because they love it. Leaders of such institutions are waiting for your service, if such is the kind you may render.

"In every such institution, on however small a basis it may operate, there is an invisible community of human souls, living and dead, who have loved the church and its ideals. If you find you can aid in that little church back home, there, too, is the field in which your best endeavors will find full play."

Federal Aid Is Asked In New Mexico Flood

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 6 (AP). Heavy onrush of water from Alamogordo Dam, washing away valuable farm lands, prompted Gov. Clyde Tingley to order State engineers into action tonight.

The executive estimated damage below the dam at $100,000. He also joined Carlsbad residents in appeals for Federal aid in emergency flood protection near Fort Sumner. At Carlsbad, 180 miles below Fort Sumner on the Pecos River, flood waters had flattened out, bringing a prediction by L. E. Foster, United States reclamation engineer, that possibility of a damaging flood crest above Carlsbad is remote.

Steel Strikers Ask Roosevelt To Act at Once

C. I. O. Leaders Hold Two Rallies; Shots Exchanged at Ohio Plant.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 6.—President Roosevelt was asked today to bring the Nation's big steel strike to a peaceful end, as gunfire once more shattered a Sabbath calm, and strike leaders mobilized their followers at two points for displays of strength in the war against three steel producers for bargaining contracts.

A telegraphic appeal to the President, urging him "to act at once to bring the strike to a peaceful end" was dispatched by representatives of 80 local unions belonging to the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee in the Calumet region of Indiana. It was the first time since the steel war was started May 26 that a direct request has been made to the White House for intervention.

The appeal went out just before the S. W. O. C. gathered 4,000 followers for an Indiana Harbor, Ind., rally, the second big demonstration on the day's program.

5,000 Hear Murray.

The other gathering was held at Canton, where 5,000 persons heard Philip Murray, chief of the S. W. O. C. forces, say he had asked Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio to prosecute Tom Girdler, board chairman of Republic Steel Corporation, on a charge of possessing munitions of war in his plants.

Murray said only six corporations in Ohio have been given permits to possess machine guns and that he could not find Republic on the list.

"You have this fight won," he told the crowd. "The Republic Steel Corporation is not big enough to whip your union. We are going to establish collective bargaining in steel whether the magnates like it or not."

Two hours before dawn Canton police reported 100 shots were fired in an exchange between steel pickets and at least six men who waded a Canton creek to try to get into one of Republic's rolling mills.

In the dark the shots all missed and three men were reported to have entered the plant. Their companions disappeared. Patrolman Clarence Rhodes said he fired once with a tear gas gun to disperse pickets congregated at the scene of the shooting.

Ask Joint Agreement.

In asking the President to step into the steel strike, the S. W. O. C. petitioners proposed that he have a "joint wage agreement written and signed by the steel corporations and the S. W. O. C."

Meanwhile Baltimore & Ohio Railroad officials were appealing to Gov. Davey to protect their property in the Ohio strike area from being wrecked by the picket blockade, and in Chicago Republic attorneys were studying an order by Mayor Edward J. Kelly that Republic cease housing workers in the South Chicago plant on the ground it violated health regulations.

In Youngstown, Ed Gray, secretary of the Independent Society of Workers of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., claimed more than 5,000 mill hands had signed a petition asking civil authorities to clear away the picket lines that they might return to their jobs.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Inland Steel Corporation and Republic compromise the trio of companies involved in the strike which has left upward of 70,000 workers idle.

As the strike moved into its eleventh day there were no visible signs it was nearer a peaceful settlement than when it started on the night of May 26, shutting down almost all the production machinery of one-sixth of the Nation's steel industry.

Miles of picket lines around the truck mills from Chicago to Buffalo have been firmly entrenched. Railroad spurs into some mills have been blockaded, and in Chicago, Buffalo, Canton, Warren and Niles, Ohio, where Republic Steel has endeavored to maintain production in spite of the strike, the determined S. W. O. C. has striven to enforce a "strike or starve" blockade.

Ford Plants Organized.

Detroit, June 6 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers of America claimed today all the employes in some Ford Motor Co. plants already have signed union membership cards.

Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. A., reported the "Ford organizing campaign" of the Committee for Industrial Organization was proceeding "steadily" and "that the company's opposition was not "scaring anybody."

He did not name any plants or cities, but the union does not claim to have achieved its goal—organization of a majority of the 89,300 employes in the vast Rouge plant in suburban Dearborn.

Peace Forecast in California.

Richmond, Calif., June 6 (AP).—Amid unofficial predictions of quick peace, striking United Automobile Workers met today to reconsider their rejection of a proposal of their own leaders to end the tie-up of the Ford Motor Co. plant here.

Frank Slaby, local president of the U. A. W. A., and Clarence Bullwinkel, plant manager, said everything possible would be done toward resuming operations tomorrow in the event of a favorable vote.

9 Convicted in Shoe Strike.

Auburn, Me., June 6 (U.P.).—A superior court jury early today convicted the nine Committee for Industrial Organization leaders of conspiracy in connection with the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike. Three defendants were freed on directed verdicts.

The jury announced its findings at 1 a. m., after 9½ hours' deliberation. Judge Arthur Chapman deferred sentence until Monday. Specifically, the defendants were charged with conspiracy to injure the business of the Charles Cushman Shoe Co. here.

Powers Hapgood, New England C. I. O. secretary, and six other organizers already are serving six-month sentences for contempt of an anti-strike injunction. The strike in Lewiston and Auburn was called by C. I. O.'s United Shoe Workers of America March 26 for a 15 per cent wage increase, 40-hour week, U. S. W. A. recognition and a closed shop.

Agencies Free Of Presidential Control Urged

trol of sub-legislation to executive department heads.

"To the contention that large fields of public policy are dominated and controlled by these commissions, the answer is that they should be. It is not desirable that these newer social policies be the football of politics.

"These boards and commissions are agents of Congress, both for the making of investigations for Congress and the formulation of sub-legislative policy. They are in no sense agents of the President. In case the President should control their administrative activity, he would almost of necessity also control their policy.

"It is conceivable that the President might be opposed to the will of Congress and consequently might fail to implement the acts of Congress in such a way that their purpose would be fulfilled.

"Several of these commissions are in a broad sense exercising powers of management rather than of mere regulation, and some are engaged in the adjustment and reconciliation of conflicting interests and serving in an advisory capacity."

Answers Query.

The institution, Byrd said, in answer to the question, "Is the finding of facts an administrative matter to be under control of department heads or the President, or is it a quasi-judicial matter belonging properly to the quasi-judicial board, independent of the head of the department or the President?" answered:

"Such questions as what is an unfair method of competition, what is a reasonable rate, what factors constitute discrimination, what is a reasonable rate level, whether a railroad line shall be abandoned, or whether one radio station is interfering with another, assume by their very nature a judicial aspect.

"The President is subject to almost no juridical control. Neither the writs of injunction nor mandamus will lie against him as they will against actions of the independent regulatory authorities. Nor can he be made financially responsible for his executive acts. On the other hand, the independent boards and commissions may be subjected to a strict control by the courts."

Eight Recommendations.

Byrd summarized as follows the Institution's recommendations in grouping of agency functions:

"1. Reorganization of the Federal Trade Commission to eliminate confusion of powers and strengthen its functioning.

"2. Transfer certain unfair trade practice functions (including control over packers and over foods and drugs insofar as unfair competitive methods are involved) from the Agriculture Department to the Federal Trade Commission.

"3. Transfer control over commodity exchanges from the Agriculture Department and the Commodity Exchange Commission to the Federal Trade Commission.

"4. Transfer Justice Department powers over monopolies and restraint of trade under the anti-trust act to the Federal Trade Commission, except trial of criminal cases.

"5. Transfer Bureau of Air Commerce regulatory functions to the Interstate Commerce Commission (or an agency in the general field of transportation).

"6. Abolish the Federal Alcohol Administration (members of which have not yet been appointed) and continue alcohol control in the Treasury Department, at a savings estimated by experts up to a quarter of a million dollars; or as an alternate divide the control according to (1) pure food and drug, (2) social, and (3) trade aspects, and distribute it accordingly to the Pure Food and Drug Administration, Treasury Department and the Federal Trade Commission.

"7. Control over the policy and administration of Federal regulatory bodies should not be given to the Chief Executive.

"8. An adminstrative court system to enforce regulatory laws; a code of administrative adjudicatory procedures; proper system of enforcement methods, and a simple but adequate system of appeal. (Experts say this recommendation would result in economies which would offset by far moderate additional costs involved.)"

3 Other Suggestions.

Added to these recommendations were the following, in a separate chapter on units promoting commerce and industry:

"1. Corrections for 'administrative defects' in the granting of patents, trade marks and copyrights, 'attributable to the scattering of activities and procedural shortcomings.

"2. A new foreign trade promotion co-ordination arrangement between the State and Commerce Departments.

"3. Transfer of the Weather Bureau to the Commerce Department or some agency directly concerned with transportation."

19,000,000 Jobs Found By U. S. in Four Years

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins reported yesterday the United States Employment Service had made more than 19,000,000 job placements in the four years of its existence.

She said the agency had received employment applications from 26,000,000 persons.

The Wagner-Peyser act, under which the service was created four years ago yesterday, established the framework for gradual development of what the Secretary called "a confederation of State employment services" financed jointly by the Government and the participating States.

Yawn—Yawn—Yawn—for 300 Hours

Mrs. Jesse O. Hinshaw sat on the front porch of her home at Charlotte, N. C., yesterday and yawned, which of itself wasn't so remarkable, the weather being what it has been, except that Mrs. Hinshaw's yawns are a kind of sickness. She's yawned steadily for 300 hours and all remedies have failed to make her stop. Without apparent cause, Mrs. Hinshaw said, she "just started yawning."

Dr. Townsend To Retain Rule Of Pension Unit

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 6.—Dr. Francis E. Townsend said today he would continue his old-age pension movement and would not relinquish leadership of the Townsend National Recovery Plan, Inc., despite the resignations of 12 major executives of his organization.

The national officers announced their resignations yesterday through J. W. Brinton, vice president and general manager of the organization and of the Townsend Weekly. He said all had signed a statement criticizing Dr. Townsend for carrying on "a fight against legislation proposed by the President which has no bearing on the Townsend plan."

"When I left Chicago some eight weeks ago on an extended itinerary through Western States," Dr. Townsend said today in a written statement, "the financial affairs at our national headquarters seemed in good condition."

Told About Funds.

When he returned, he said, he was informed there were not enough funds to carry on the activities of the organization, that publication of the Townsend National Weekly could not be continued, and that 12 employes, department heads and others, had signed an agreement to resign.

"I was informed there existed an abdication statement under which I was to relinquish leadership and control of the Townsend movement," he added, "and was to confer power and control upon this group of men who had proved themselves wholly unworthy of such a responsibility, and that if I would sign this statement they were ready to resume their responsibilities and to pull the affairs of the Townsend organization out of the difficulties of their own making.

"I made clear that with the faith imposed in me by the many devoted people in the organization, I could not take such a step."

Brinton Explains.

Replying to the statement, Brinton said he admitted that when Dr. Townsend went on his tour, the purpose of which, he said, was to make money to support the general welfare act, the financial condition of the organization was good.

"The tour was arranged by me from Chicago," Brinton said. "The meetings would have, as they had had done in the past, grossed him about $1,200 a meeting, but for some unknown reason, the good doctor canceled them by wire and informed the Chicago office he would handle the meetings in the field."

Brinton contended that immediately receipts fell from $250 per meeting to as low as $50, expenditures exceeded receipts and expenses had to be paid out of the movement's national treasury.

Where Takoma Park Highway Buckled From the Heat

Heat uplifted this section of Poplar avenue in Takoma Park, Md., yesterday. An automobile had just passed over the piece of road when it "exploded" and rose to a height of about two feet above the usual level. A smaller crack appeared on Philadelphia avenue near the Takoma Park Elementary School but it was raised only about two inches.

More Swimming Pools.

If for no other reason than that it was dedicated without a speech, the East Potomac swimming pool deserves mention. First Assistant Secretary of the Interior Theodore A. Walters, who had planned to make an address, took a swim instead. Splash, and it was dedicated. Would that other dedicators would follow this excellent example. The country could easily be spared the dull hours wasted every year in dedication ceremonies. Thus, in opening a new postoffice, the mailing of a letter might take the place of oratory.

There is, however, more than the method of dedication that attracts attention to the East Potomac pool as well as the new one at Anacostia. Each is situated in a section of the city that has been entirely without safe swimming facilities. Residents of the Southwest who have heretofore felt themselves neglected in regard to municipal improvements should be grateful to the Commissioners who, together with the city planners and recreation directors, this time remembered them. Now, at last, the many children of the two neighborhoods will have something other than the Potomac to which to turn for an escape from the summer's heat. Pollution, of course, makes that stream undesirable, to say nothing of other dangers of river bathing in the vicinity of Washington.

But the river will probably continue to take its annual toll. Washington has not yet enough pools. For example, colored children in the Southwest are still without swimming facilities. And, viewing the city as a whole, it is clear Washington is underequipped with tanks. Recreation experts agree that the average city of 500,000 should have at least 10 public pools. But Washington with its high humidity and dearth of natural swimming opportunities, is no average city. It should have more than 10 pools. Yet even with two new ones, it has only nine. More pools are still needed.

A Ghost That Will Not Lie.

Great Britain may have a new prime minister but it continues to be beset by old problems, as Neville Chamberlain himself has quickly discovered.

In what was practically his first appearance in the House of Commons since he stepped into the shoes of Stanley (now Earl) Baldwin, Prime Minister Chamberlain was reminded of the very unpleasant fact that the war debt question still plays the role of Banquo's ghost at the budget feast. Opposition members in assailing the government's finance program took pains to point out that balancing of receipts against expenditures is and has been made possible only by a repudiation of debt payments to the United States.

"It is not true to say that we have repudiated the American debt."

The incident only goes to show that, as a Frenchman once said, "words are agglomerations of syllables used to conceal thought."

Mr. Walgreen's Reversal.

A happy sequel to the unbecoming "Red hunt" indulged in by legislators in Illinois two years ago with the University of Chicago as the victim is now reported. Charles A. Walgreen, who at that time and with a great fanfare, withdrew his niece from that institution, because of the subversive propaganda he felt she was being exposed to, has now given $550,000 to the university. Together with $275,000 from the Julius Rosenwald Fund, it will be used to establish an institute for the study of American principles.

Instead, then, of attempting to tear down an institution which he felt—and may still feel—was insufficiently interested in democracy, Mr. Walgreen is now acting constructively. The institute, which will bear his name, will offer courses and conduct research in the backgrounds of the Nation's history. In making the gift, Mr. Walgreen declared that he had felt for many years that it is important for citizens to have a thorough understanding of the factors which raised the United States to its present eminent position in the world. No sensible person but will be in disagreement with him on this point.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Walgreen's new attitude will be a cue for others throughout the country who, from time to time, have felt impelled to question the efficiency of the educational system and its institutions. There has been far too much emotional criticism of a Red-baiting variety. There has not been enough recognition of the constructive work which universities can and do perform and which they continue to perform on a larger scale if given the funds.

A Formidable Program.

The legislative program which the President has put before Congress is truly formidable. In addition to the court reorganization proposal on which he is now seeking to effect a compromise, there is the far-reaching governmental reorganization plan, the $1,000,000,000 slum clearance and housing bill, a farm tenancy measure, a Federal wages and hours bill, and suggested revision of the income tax law to prevent evasions. The President has also recommended the creation of regional authorities covering the entire country to make plans for conserving and controlling the utilization of our soil, water and power resources.

Apart from the proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court which has been exhaustively discussed and should be disposed of before Congress adjourns, there is not a single item on the Administration's "desired" list requiring immediate attention. Most of these proposals cannot be dealt with intelligently, indeed, without prolonged and intensive study. Such treatment they certainly will not receive in the heat of a Washington summer from Congressmen already eager to adjourn.

Senator Vandenberg's broadcast appeal for a study of the wages and hours problem with "all its related implications" during the recess "which Congress craves" is a timely warning against precipitate action. It applies with equal force to other major items of the Administration's program with the possible exception of the housing bill which may be whipped into more acceptable shape before the end of the present session.

No body of legislators could possibly respond to the demands of the Administration except by rubber-stamping bills carrying its indorsement. The reorganization plan alone calls for a revolutionary metamorphosis of the executive branch of government, and would concentrate vast new powers in the hands of the President. The soil conservation and power program likewise involves issues of great moment to future generations of Americans. It would be the height of irresponsibility for Congress to commit itself to any definite plan for conserving and developing the Nation's power resources until it had examined every aspect of this complicated problem.

The reasons for deferring action on the wages and hours bill have been presented most cogently by Senator Vandenberg. Before investing a Federal agency with extensive discretionary powers to fix wages and hours, he suggests that the whole related economic problem must be painstakingly explored lest our zeal leads us unwittingly astray. Not everybody shares the Senator's fears that the ultimate outcome of this kind of legislative interference with private industry may lead us toward the centralized authoritarian state. But nobody can deny that it is a regulatory innovation. As such, it should not be passed hastily or thoughtlessly.

Moreover, as Senator Vandenberg says, "there is such a thing as economic indigestion." Business is already suffering from an overdose of legislative panaceas. It has not yet had time to adjust itself to the numerous new measures that affect trade practices and labor policies, such as the Wagner act, the law against price discrimination, the social security act and the corporate surplus tax.

Not only businessmen but all classes in the community need a respite from constant legislative experimentation that creates fresh problems before a solution has been found for existing ones. We shall make faster progress toward a healthy national economy by taking time to think before acting.

That advice applies especially in the case of the present Congress; it can do more good by completing its pressing business and adjourning than by staying on to consider legislative proposals whose nature and objectives are imperfectly understood and whose general desirability is subject to challenge.

Where The Trouble Lies.

The House Rules Committee is considering whether to change the rules so as to prevent the expenditure of Federal funds for continuing projects without specific authorization to undertake them. The effort of the Administration to obtain funds for carrying on work upon the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy project—both initiated without Congressional approval by allocation of work relief funds—called attention to the dangers inherent in the system of lump-sum appropriations.

When Congress surrendered its right to determine how relief funds should be expended, by voting lump sums to be allocated at the discretion of the President, it created a situation that invited trouble. In most cases the pressure exerted on Congress to carry on projects initiated without its approval is most effective, especially as a refusal to grant a request for funds may mean that previous outlays are a total loss.

A mere change in rules will not correct the abuses to which pork barrel relief methods give rise. The remedy lies in ceasing to approve appropriation bills that are so loosely drawn as to make it possible to initiate projects costing huge sums without authorization of Congress. The mischief that has already been done by permitting such slipshod practices has cost and no doubt will continue to cost the country large sums.

One Year Of Blum.

French cabinets are notoriously short-lived. The fact, therefore, that the Blum government has begun its second year in office with its parliamentary support undiminished is a tribute both to the cohesiveness of the Popular Front and the skillful statesmanship of the premier.

Leon Blum was, very largely, an unknown quantity when he took office in the critical days of June, 1936. France then appeared to be on the brink of chaos. There was deep and widespread social unrest in the land, the product of parliamentary impotence, an unbalanced economic situation and a prolonged depression. A sit-down strike movement involving hundreds of thousands of workers had started and was spreading like wildfire. The government's finances were in a parlous state. Abroad, France was about at the low ebb of its prestige.

It would be a great exaggeration to say that all the problems which faced Leon Blum on June 7, 1936, have now been disposed of. They have not, by any means. The budget is still unbalanced, and is likely to remain in that state for some time unless the race in armaments can be curbed. France's economic situation, while greatly improved over a year ago, is still far from good. With costs of living getting out of hand, there is a possibility that the present capital-labor truce may be broken. And there are very dark clouds on the international horizon.

Nonetheless, it is clear that France today is in a stronger, more stable and happier position than it was a year ago. The new government has very largely justified the expectations of its followers. Acting with courage and dispatch, it has put through a larger number of needed social reforms than any other regime since the Third Republic came into being. And, latterly, it has felt itself secure enough from internal and external attack to permit industry a breathing spell.

The first year of the Blum regime has also brought a decided improvement in France's international position. The enfeebled alliances with the Little Entente nations and Poland have been strengthened in some degree. The link to Russia has been maintained despite strong pressure from the Fascist powers. Above all, there has been a marked improvement in Franco-British friendship. Those war-time allies are now allies once more in a very real sense.

In order to maintain harmony of aim and outlook with Great Britain, France has had to take a line on the Spanish problem not entirely in accord with its own desires. Yet the fact remains that the Paris and London governments have prevented the Spanish struggle from expanding into a general war.

There are many rocks and shoals ahead for the Blum regime. Centrifugal as well as centripetal factors are at work in the Popular Front and these centrifugal factors may ultimately lead to a break in the present working agreement between Radicals, Socialists and Communists. Despite occasional grumblings from this or that quarter, however, the Popular Front has held. Indeed, on the anniversary of M. Blum's accession to power, the chamber approved by the large vote of 420 to 141 the continuation for another six months of the government measure regarding collective labor contracts and compulsory arbitration of industrial disputes.

M. Blum may have been an unknown quantity twelve months ago when, for the first time, he assumed office. He now stands revealed as one of the outstanding figures in the current political drama.

Storks And Styles.

When hats reach a peak, birth rates go the other way. Flat sailors and pillboxes may delight milady's heart, but they have the opposite effect on storks. In other words, what is meat to milliners is likely to prove poison to obstetricians. At least, that's what Mrs. Helen Washburn, authoress, concludes from her research among birth and beret statistics.

Mrs. Washburn thinks that the connection between storks and styles is a fairly simple one. "Men," she observes, "just aren't interested in women when they rig themselves out in funny hats." The Empress Eugenie of 1931, with its atrocious plume, was responsible for the appallingly low birth rate in 1932. The deluge of cloches in 1922, she contends, brought about a depression in bib business in 1923. And when cartwheel hats appeared in 1927, the long-legged bird took a vacation for two years.

Before accepting Mrs. Washburn's conclusions, however, some skeptics will demand further proof. They always do. Fortunately, their demands can be gratified by checking up on the baby crop two years hence. If bridal veils and baby bonnets aren't completely plowed under after men take a look at this season's feminine headgear, then the stork need never worry again about where his next year's business is coming from.

At the rate instruments of warfare are being manufactured, if we have another world war we'll need another world.

So often yawning is the act of opening your mouth because someone else won't close his.

The Ghost Writers' Union.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The most popular and perfect union in the country is that of the "Ghost Writers' Union."

They have no strikes, no discord within their ranks and pay no dues. All their demands are met without question or quibble. They have the united backing of the Administration, Congress and the Supreme Court. There are no constitutional limits to their hours of labor or charge for services, and, judging from what is spilled to us daily over the radio and in open forum, they must be kept busy.

What makes them so popular with public officials is that they do not require their purchasers to announce: "This is a product of ghost writers."

Roosevelt And W. C. T. U.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In Mr. Roosevelt's speech of acceptance in 1932, he said: "From this date on the eighteenth amendment is doomed. When that happens we, as Democrats, must and will enable the States to protect themselves against the importation of intoxicating liquors where such importation is a violation of their State laws. We must rightly and morally prevent the return of the saloon."

Did Mr. Roosevelt mean it? If he did, what has he done to keep his promise and prevent the return of the old-time saloon? Why did he not answer this question in his address of welcome as delivered by Francis B. Sayre? His address had not one word in regard to the liquor situation. In this respect it was a frost.

As chairman of the temperance committee of Woodside M. E. Church, Buffalo, I ask the President whether he knows his picture hangs in the window of every saloon in Buffalo, N. Y.?

Mr. Roosevelt promised the saloon would not return, but today, instead of 177,000 licensed places in this country where strong drink was sold prior to the adoption of the eighteenth amendment, today we have 423,000 places where strong drink is sold. Yes, the saloon is back, but under another name, "but a skunk by any other name smells just as bad."

During the four years of the Democratic Administration under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt the temperance progress of the last hundred years has been wiped out in the U. S. A. America's one hope today is not in repeal, but in repentance; not in revenue, but in righteousness; not in beer and whisky, but in returning to God.

Streetcar Fares.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I wish to commend you for your editorial in The Post of June 5, entitled "Streetcar Fares." It is a fair statement of the problem and shows that the writer has at least taken the trouble to inform himself of the facts before expressing an opinion. If others who are making daily statements regarding this situation would also get the facts, the really serious problem of improving the mass transportation here could be much more readily solved.

Spokesmen for some of the citizens organizations are demanding improvement in service and lower fares. The unions which represent the company's employes have on three separate occasions during the past three years demanded and gotten much higher wages. Congress has enacted legislation which added more than $200,000 annually to the company's tax bill, and also is responsible for a law which requires the company to carry all the school children in the District of Columbia for a 3-cent fare—an indirect tax of between $200,000 and $300,000 a year.

At the time of the merger in December, 1933, this company had approximately $6,000,000 in cash. Since that time it has spent the $6,000,000 and aproximately $1,300,000 additional out of earnings on new equipment, track changes, etc. It has just borrowed an additional $1,500,000 from Washington banks with which to purchase more new streetcars and buses.

Despite a steady increase in its patronage which added approximately $1,000,000 annually to its revenue in each of the last three years, the increases in payments to labor and in taxes have been so great that nothing has been available for the stockholders.

If the service is to be further improved or even maintained, it will be necessary for the company to borrow additional money. Obviously it cannot borrow unless it can operate at a profit.

Higher wages, higher taxes, better service and lower fares to the public just don't make sense.

"A Despoiled Mecca."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The laudable ambition of every red-blooded American is to see at least once before he dies, Washington—"City Beautiful."

Why "City Beautiful?" Is it our mammoth Capitol, our luxurious and traditional White House, wonderful museums, vast executive and administrative buildings, the wide and leafy streets? Yes, these, but by no means all. As I recall it, one-third of the present area of the District of Columbia is devoted to parks, flowers, recreational centers. Judging from comments most frequently heard from first-time visitors, these are the things that form the most lasting impression; things that have earned the sobriquet: "City Beautiful."

That the title of this letter may be appreciated, I would suggest that the reader now take a trip around the Tidal Basin, the Lincoln Memorial, down to Hain's Point and back to Washington Monument. What will he see? A vast, tented city, large enough to house an army, and encroaching at all points upon the shrines heretofore held sacred to the beautification of our city and to the pleasurable and needful enjoyment of the vast multitude of Government clerks and employes.

Starting with the eastern side of the Tidal Basin, we find that vast and tented army has taken possession, pre-empted entirely, what was formerly the West Potomac Golf Course and which, heretofore, furnished pleasurable and healthful enjoyment to many. Thence on to Lincoln Memorial—more tents, toilet buildings and accessories, etc., for the public view. Again, down the Potomac to a part of the East Potomac Golf Course, back to, and covering a portion of the Washington Monument grounds.

The Boy Scouts, we are told, are going to have a "Jamboree," with estimated attendance of anywhere from 35,000 to 50,000. This, during the hottest and, in many respects, most dangereous season of the year. We read that "somebody," in connection with this enterprise, has "insured" against all possible hazards of fire, flood, tempests, epidemics, and that such insurance saved—somebody—$300,000 last year when this same enterprise was called off on account of a threatened infantile paralysis spread. Have the people of Washington any "insurance" that there will be no epidemic by reason of these hastily arranged accommodations for such a vast assembly, and during the hottest season of the year?

I would like to inquire by what authority is a large portion of Washington's most beautiful vistas and health-giving recreational facilities to be pre-empted and at least to some extent despoiled (as they don't seem to care when and how often they dig) for the boys who doubtless would much rather "rough it" out in the woods—Rock Creek, perhaps?

Disillusioned Employe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As a member of the American Federation of Government Employes who attended the District department meeting May 28, I could not help but be shocked and deeply disappointed at the action taken by my organization. How can any Government worker or group of workers fail to see the terrible danger to Government service in general and Government employes in particular threatened by the Byrnes and Cannon proposals?

Any policy of indiscriminately cutting the appropriations of all Federal agencies and departments is bound to impair the service rendered by those agencies and work great hardships on the personnel.

Yet, in the face of this threat, the national office of the A. F. G. E. and the District department voted down all proposals for any strenuous action on the part of their organization. This, in a time of great danger to their membership, seems to me to be nothing but betrayal of the trust placed in their hands.

Yours for a more active and democratic Government union.

DISILLUSIONED.

From A 'Victim' Of Section 213.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Class legislation is, I believe, a proper definition for that remaining provision of the economy act, "Section 213."

When Congress passed this law the intent was to spread out Government jobs so that more families would benefit.

Has this result been accomplished? Not to the extent expected. Why? I believe that in the careless interpretation of the act by personnel officers, chiefs of divisions and department heads, there has developed a condition of injustice and a lack of consideration for those married couples in low-salaried grades in the Government service, many of whom were buying homes on their combined salaries, but whose individual salary was not sufficient to support two people. When one of these workers was asked to resign or be discharged it meant in nearly every case that they lost their investment in a home and in some cases separation could not be avoided.

Did those married couples in the high-salaried brackets receive the same treatment as the couples mentioned above? In a few cases in some departments, yes, where the law was followed out to the letter. But in the majority of cases office politics, club or organization friends, or acquaintances in high positions came to the assistance of these couples, explaining how necessary their services are and what a loss to the Government it would be if either of these people were to leave the service. How much of this is the truth and how much is "bunk," I will leave to others to decide.

At any rate most of them remained and are still on the job, according to those in a position to know.

If the little fellow's place can be filled, then the more important job can be filled also and there is no justice in invoking a law to fire one clerk and withhold action against another clerk because he happens to stand in with the powers that be in that department.

If this law has to remain on the statute books of the Government, then it is the duty of all departments to enforce its provisions without fear or favor.

Better conditions will prevail throughout the whole Government service if this unpopular law is repealed at once. The threat of the "213" axe now hanging over the heads of so many good clerks does not promote a good spirit. Rather it destroys confidence and lowers efficiency.

Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, has introduced a bill to correct this condition by outright repeal of "Section 213" so if the Senate and the House will get behind this bill just as soon as it leaves the Senate Civil Service Committee their favorable action will put an end to this kind of favoritism in the Government service.

Trailer's Social Influence

THE nation that has learned to accept with nonchalance the automobile, airplane, radio and mechanical refrigerator—all within a few decades—is now very much agog over the advent of the trailer.

It seems to the writer that the movement is fraught with tremendous possibilities—both for good and ill—and that if it continues to expand, as it now shows signs of doing, it will introduce unprecedented complexities in our way of life. Whether the net result is good or bad depends largely upon the intelligence with which the problem is handled. It does not appear likely that the trailer can be regulated out of existence. The activities of antagonistic officials who prescribe rules with that end in view will probably merely aggravate the problem. For if the officials of Smithtown, any State, place a taboo upon rolling homes, it is very likely that Farmer Jones with a large farm just outside the city limits may find a year-round crop of trailers more profitable than an annual crop of potatoes. A large unregulated community of trailerites on the outskirts of the city may prove more awkward than a controlled community within the city.

The country is faced with a housing shortage. Permits issued for residential buildings in 257 identical cities dropped from a high point of 491,222 in 1925 to 27,381 in 1932, 25,879 in 1933 and 22,063 in 1934. They crept up to 55,810 in 1935 and 116,114 in 1936. There was no plethora of desirable housing in 1929 and the extreme underbuilding of the seven depression years has brought about a serious situation. There is substantial agreement among housing authorities that one-third of the population is living in sub-standard housing. The need for new dwelling units has been variously estimated at from 750,000 to 1,400,000 annually for the next ten years.

If an average of 250,000 trailers is produced annually within the next few years and if as many as one-half of these are used as year-round homes, the trailer may prove to be a potent factor in averting a situation of wretched overcrowding and intolerable housing for great numbers of persons. For the removal of 625,000 families within five years and 1,250,000 within ten years from the low-cost housing market would make conditions more tolerable for those who stick to the stationary home, as overcrowding, rent profiteering and the use of most unfit structures would be thereby diminished.

The trailer may be of profound significance in affecting the mobility of labor, particularly in the case of seasonal trades. Farm hands, waiters in resort hotels, and other workers in migratory occupations may be able to find a new dignity and comfort in their trades as a result of these rolling homes.

Not only workers in seasonal trades but also those in dynamic industries find security in mobility. The Federal Government has been attempting during the last few years to build up a co-ordinated system of public employment offices. The migratory laborer may find his economic position very much improved as a result of the simultaneous development of public employment offices which keep him informed of job openings and the trailer which enables him to follow up the job.

The trailer may give several new twists to our educational program. From such scanty data as are available children seem somewhat in the minority among the permanent trailer population. Children of school age do, however, appear in the trailer colonies in some sections in sufficient numbers to cause protests from local officials concerning educational burdens. It is probable that this problem will increase in magnitude and may prove instrumental in bringing about greater Federal support of education.

* * *

The house trailer is certainly not an ideal form of residence, but it is vastly better than many persons now have. For Mr. and Mrs. Suburbanite and their two or three children, who now live in a comfortable six or eight-room house with modern conveniences, plenty of sunshine and good environment, to give up their home and adopt the trailer life would be a decidedly retrograde movement. For the family living in a small, dirty, unheated New York tenement to which the sunshine never penetrates and which is served by a filthy hall toilet, life in a $500 trailer in a well regulated trailer park would be a great forward step.

Our attention has so far been concentrated on the possibilities for good in the trailer movement. These should not blind us to the possibilities for evil.

The trailer appears to be definitely a menace to traffic conditions. Unregulated trailer camps may prove detrimental to the health and morals of a community. Fire hazards may be created.

One problem that rises in connection with the trailer is as to how and where the trailer should be taxed. Should it be considered a house and taxed as real estate, or should it be taxed as a motor vehicle or as other tangible personal property?

Before the trailer movement becomes very widespread it is probable that Federal legislation will have to be enacted to prevent children of school age being moved about (without good reason) during the school term. Otherwise our State school attendance laws will become futile in many cases.

Undoubtedly also there will have to be some educational assistance for those States receiving the great influx of winter residents.

Letter To Pat Ryan.

LETTER TO Mr. Pat Ryan, stock clerk at $22 a week, with a wife and four children, living at 1530 Beach avenue, Bronx, New York:

Dear Mr. Ryan: So you won $150,000 on the Irish

Hospital lottery on the English Derby, did you? Feel pretty good about it, do you? Well, wake up, brother. You are just dreaming. Because by the time the Federal and State income tax departments get through with you you won't have $150,000 but $83,214.

You can deduct $2,500 for yourself and Mrs. Ryan and $400 each for the kids, which is $4,100. After that you begin to shower down to New York State. You will pay $380 on the first $9,000 and 7 per cent on your net income above that figure, and when you have done that and think you are all square they will put you through the wringer again just for luck, extracting a special 1 per cent tax on the whole net amount. You will pay New York State $11,422 out of your $150,000, and then you will settle down to real, serious business with the Federals.

The Federals will clip you for $55,364, but they are decent about one thing at least. They won't tax you on the money you have already surrendered to the State. You can't say the same thing for the State. They make you pay 9 per cent on the amount you will pay the United States Government, or approximately $4,982 tax on money which you really never will receive, as it will be earmarked for the national Treasury.

• • • •

SO YOU COME UP with $83,000, not $150,000, even though lotteries are illegal in this country and the deal whereby you won the $150,000 was one of questionable legality. If you got your ticket through the mail it certainly wasn't kosher with the postal laws. But although Mr. Big has sounded off with great official piety about the immorality of persons who take advantage of all the breaks under the income tax laws, there aren't any prigs in the Internal Revenue Department. The Federal and State governments aren't hampered by any fastidious moral concepts in such matters.

Why, do you realize, Mr. Ryan, that although Mr. Roosevelt sets great store by morality, the United States Government and New York State are silent partners in every house of prostitution, every burglary and swindle and gambling house and every fence for the disposal of stolen goods in their respective jurisdiction? Fact, Mr. Ryan. If a man—not you but some hypothetical vicious character—sets up a chain-store system of brothels the Government and State are entitled to and, on precedent, would be likely to demand their cut of the profits.

We think any man who would make a dollar this way is about as low as they make them, but the income tax laws regard such money as clean revenue and would take the wage of infamy without the slightest twinge. If a man runs a fence and the Government can prove that he made a profit he can be prosecuted for defrauding the Treasury if he doesn't make out a correct return and pay off.

• • • •

THIS IS NOT mere theory, Mr. Ryan. It was a fact in the case of Al Capone. Although Al made most of his money in bootlegging, which was illegal, he got 11 years on the rock off San Francisco for failure to pay Uncle Sam his cut. He wasn't sent away for bootlegging but for double-crossing his partner in crime. They used to say around Chicago that Capone also ran a line of lady-parlors around Cicero, and if so the profit on this business was fairly taxable, too, under the Government code of morality. I don't quite recall whether they went into that phase of his myriad interests in the trial.

They wouldn't have to, because they had him cold on the bootleg thing, but legally the Government was his partner, muscling in on the old muscle man in every one of his profitable activities. What do you think of that for morality, Mr. Ryan?

You know something, Mr. Ryan? Far be it from me to suggest a loophole for a tax-dodger, but that which I am about to mention is not a loophole; it's a door. It says in the paper that you are an Irishman, naturalized American.

At $22 a week with a wife and four kids after 12 years in this country you are not doing any too well in the land of promise, are you? Well, if you just go back to Ireland and stay there the whole $150,000 is yours. That might be immoral, but that is for you to decide.

Sorry to wake you up, Mr. Ryan.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Tax Probe.

Q.—Now then, Mr. Zwipper, you incorporated your yacht, turned it over to a holding company and leased the yacht from this company?

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Why did you do this?

A.—You have to have a yacht to understand the dire necessity of it.

Q.—If a yacht is so expensive to operate, why buy one?

Q.—Did you enjoy cruising on the cool waters?

A.—Everything was fine until I got into the hot water.

• • • •

The Lady and the Hired Husband.

Q.—Mrs. Tinkleberry, did you turn your country estate over to your personal holding company?

A.—I did.

Q.—What for?

A.—It was the only way I could hold it.

Q.—You appointed your husband as manager of the estate and paid him a salary. Why?

A.—That's what I've been wondering, the loafer!

Q.—Was his work in any way satisfactory?

A.—No, but it kept him away from the bathing beach.

Q.—You are aware that this makes you look bad?

A.—Yes, but you ought to see my estate!

• • • •

The Chicken Farmer.

Q.—You are a big manufacturer, yet you claim a loss of $150,000 in running a chicken farm?

A.—Guilty as charged.

Q.—How did you happen to go into the chicken business?

A.—I've been trying to figure that out ever since I went into a hennery with 3,000 hens and found only a half dozen eggs.

Q.—Don't you know this was highly unethical?

Case of the Bahama Visitor.

Q.—You visit the Bahamas two or three times a year, do you not, Mr. Mootlewirt?

A.—I do. You should see those giant marlin leap!

Q.—We are not interested in marlin.

A.—Well, take those swordfish then. A big fellow will run your line out so far you . . .

Q.—Never mind about swordfish. What we want to know is . . .

Hainan Daggerpoint

China And Britain Co-operate In Development Of New Pacific Base On Island Lying 250 Miles Southwest Of Hongkong.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

ABOUT 250 MILES southwest of Britain's strongly fortified Hongkong lies the mountainous island of Hainan. Like a gigantic turret, the island faces France's Indo-China, Japan's Formosa and mandated islands, China's fertile southern provinces, and the new Philippine Commonwealth. Yet, despite its obvious strategical importance, Hainan remained hidden in obscurity until last fall, when a murder brought it into the limelight and made it the center of bitter international intrigue.

A peaceful Japanese drug-store owner was disemboweled by some hate-drunk Chinese soldiers in Pakhoi, souternmost China, on September 3. The assassins belonged to the Nineteenth Route Army, which fought the Japanese in the ruins of Shanghai in 1932, and consequently harbored little brotherly love for the empire of the Rising Sun.

The Nipponese navy, eager to parallel the successes achieved by the Japanese army in North China, acted with dispatch and determination. While notes were lodged with the Nanking government, men-of-war were rushed south to investigate and deal justice.

But to the painful surprise of Nanking and other interested governments, the Japanese warships did not drop their anchors in or off Pakhoi, but proceeded directly to Hoihow, a port in Hainan Island.

The incident was amicably settled. The Chinese widow of the murdered man and his half-Chinese children were given a solatium by the Nanking government. The troublesome Nineteenth Army was reorganized and moved out of Pakhoi.

Japanese Maneuver Had Naval Significance.

BUT NEITHER Nanking, nor London or Paris, forgot the significance of the Japanese maneuver. General staffs in these capitals undoubtedly spent many an anxious hour, studying maps and considering counter-moves. The Chinese reaction was especially sharp.

A leading daily in Nanking accused Japan of seeking to capture the island, "to deal a death blow to Hongkong and at the same time to cut China's oceanic communications with the outside world."

"Since Hainan Island," said the journal, "stands in such a danger of being snatched by Japan, China must leave nothing undone to defend it. On the one hand, it is hoped that all of the 3,000,000 inhabitants of the island can be trained to become soldiers and producers, strengthening their position for the defense of China's territorial integrity.

"On the other hand, it is hoped that the Central Government and financial groups in China will adopt a positive program for the economic development of the island. The building of railways and the opening of harbors should be important parts of any such program, which is indispensable to the defense of the island against foreign aggression as well as to the retention of China's sovereignty over the island • • •"

As soon as the Pakhoi incident was settled, Hainan was made a special military area, with a strong garrison, commanded by Gen. Gaston Wong, a returned student from France.

"Selling" Campaign Arranged For British.

A DETERMINED publicity campaign, designed to "sell" Hainan to British capitalists and imperial strategists was launched by Chinese leaders and the state-controlled press. Extravagant claims regarding the resources and economic possibilities of the island were made by government spokesmen.

The barren, poverty-ridden island almost overnight became the "Paradise of the Pacific" and the "Future Bread Basket of China."

Aware of Nanking's efforts to make John Bull pull Chinese chestnuts out of the Japanese fire, Great Britain nevertheless entertained Chinese proposals with a ready mind.

Daggerpoint Between Singapore And Hongkong.

JAPANESE CONTROLLED Hianan, the British strategists realized long ago, would form a dagger pointing at the air and sea communication lanes between Singapore and Hongkong. It would also give Japan a dominant voice in Southern China—until today a British sphere of influence.

Controlled by Britain, on the other hand, the island would become an important link in the British defense barrier, stretching from Hongkong to Australia. It would assure greater security for Hongkong in a war with Japan. It would finally mean continued British domination of South China.

The Chinese plans for the development of the island bore a strong odor of gunpowder. The major projects included: construction of a railway around the island, and another one, across Hainan; building of highways; dredging of harbors; and construction of fortifications and airdromes.

Great Britain's reported readiness to invest sums in such "economic" enterprises, therefore, assumed a significance which was not likely to be misinterpreted by the navy strategists in Tokyo. While the Japanese government spokesmen maintained a tight-lipped silence, eager to avoid any controversies which would affect the current Anglo-Japanese negotiations in London, Nipponese newspapers displayed no such reticence.

Said a local Japanese daily: "The outbreak of the Pakhoi incident last year and the subsequent anchoring of Japanese warships at Hoihow aroused the British government, which later approached Nanking with a proposal to develop the island.

"British interest in the island cannot have sprung from economic considerations, if we realize that Hainan is barren of natural resources. It cannot be developed into a market, and consequently large investments are out of the question.

"Therefore, Britain's interest lies solely in the military value of the island. It goes without saying that the strategic value of Hongkong will be enhanced if an airdrome is built on the island, thus facilitating the communications between Hongkong and Singapore.

"The British government, seeking to reorientate its military policy in the Orient, has induced the nationalist government to develop Hainan island and by extending the necessary financial assistance, is paving the way to secure rights to use the island for military purposes.

"Japan, which has assumed the responsibility for stabilizing conditions in the Orient, will never tolerate such ambitious intrigues. If Britain understands Japan's real intentions, she should immediately abandon any moves that might bring on misunderstanding."

Island Declared Far From Being An Eldorado.

IN AT LEAST one respect the Japanese journal was right: Hainan is not an Eldorado. The island is about 100 miles square and has a population of between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000. Of these, about 500,000 belong to the Li tribe, which lives in caves and engages in farming with some of the most primitive agricultural implements in existence.

The larger portion of the population belongs to the Han tribe, whose members are described by the Chinese press as "adventurous." They are fishermen and pirates, who infest the waters around Hainan and collect a tribute from every junk sailing to or from the island.

Depicted as a "bread basket," the island nevertheless imports food staples. The major items of imports, reaching a total of about $400,000 a year, are rice, flour, beans, petroleum and cotton cloth. Hainan's exports, reaching $500,000 a year, include live pigs, cattle, eggs, sugar, leather and salt. The last is one of the major industries of the island.

There are 172 big and small towns on the islands, but its harbors are shallow and often navigable only by junks. Its communications are pitiful; its abject poverty is appalling.

Little has been done thus far to carry the high-sounding plans into life. A Chinese corporation with 300,000 United States dollars behind it, was formed in Singapore to develop trade between Malaya and the island. Reports are also afoot in Nanking that very shortly $9,000,000 would be appropriated for the economic development of Hainan from the British portion of the Boxer Indemnity Fund.

Nothing will probably be done on a major scale until the conclusion of the current Anglo-Japanese negotiations in London. In these talks, watched with intense anxiety in Nanking, Hainen undoubtedly forms one of the topics. If, on the other hand, the pourparlers came to naught, Hainan will rapidly become another Hongkong or Singapore.

Japan will scarcely regard such a move with equanimity. For this reason alone, Hainan must be watched carefully, as a sure barometer of the political weather on the Pacific.

Back to Whales!

A Satire On Non-intervention

This satire on the proceedings of the nonintervention committee has been translated by the Living Age from the Canard Enchaine, Paris weekly. The author gave his concept of what he would have heard if hidden under the table in the Locarno room of the British Foreign Office.

Scene: Room where the nonintervention committee is deliberating. One of its most important sessions is going on.

Lord Plymouth, the English delegate (opening the meeting)—Gentlemen, today, if there is no objection, we shall take up the grave problem of the protection of whales. The race of whales, gentlemen, is being seriously menaced today and is, indeed, shaken to its very foundations . . .

Maisky, the Russian delegate—But, Your Excellency, what about Spain?

Lord Plymouth (dryly)—My dear colleague, I shall not allow you to divert me to a discussion of irrelevant matters. Again you are forgetting that this is the nonintervention committee which, as its name indicates, should be the last to intervene in Spanish affairs.

Grandi, the Italian delegate—Very good!

Von Ribbentrop, the German delegate—Mr. Maisky has a regrettable tendency to meddle in what is none of his business.

Monteiro, the Portuguese delegate (sourly)—If the Soviet representative continues his dilatory tactics, I shall be obliged to ask my government to recall me.

Corbin, the French delegate (to Maisky)—Come now, calm yourself. There is a time for everything.

Lord Plymouth—As I was saying, before being so unnecessarily interrupted, the whale, a species of aquatic mammal which once was very numerous, is now rapidly disappearing. Only the other day one of them was cast up on the Spanish coast near Bilbao.

Grandi (leaping to his feet)—At Bilbao! To feed the Reds, eh? This is a flagrant violation of the nonintervention pact. (To Maisky) Do you hear me, sir? The Duce will not tolerate this! Tomorrow I shall send 20 submarines to Barcelona.

Lord Plymouth—Calm yourself, Mr. Grandi. There was only one whale!

Grandi (somewhat appeased)—Very well. I shall send only ten submarines.

Lord Plymouth—The committee extends to you its thanks for this proof of your willingness to co-operate.

Von Ribbentrop—Inasmuch as the conversation has turned to Spain, I should like to state that Russian socks have been found on one of the Loyalist prisoners.

Maisky—But I . . .

Grandi (vehemently)—Mr. Maisky, I shall have to ask you to retract those insulting words.

Maisky—But I didn't say anything . . .

Grandi (imperiously)—Retract them anyhow. (Maisky does so.)

Lord Plymouth—Now that that is settled, let us get back to our muttons, or rather, to our whales. It seems to us that a stringent control . . .

Grandi—I must remind the noble lord that we were not to speak of control today.

Grandi (not listening)—Besides, control or no control, Italy will never agree to withdraw the volunteers she has sent to Spain.

Lord Plymouth—Inadmissible words!

Grandi (hastily)—I did not express myself correctly. I meant to say that Italy will not stop sending troops to Franco.

Corbin—Ah! That's what I thought.

Grandi (sweetly)—Forgive me, my lord, my tongue slipped.

Maisky (timidly)—If I may say one word . . .

Von Ribbentrop—I will not tolerate this abominable provocation!

Monteiro—What were you saying?

Maisky—I—I didn't say anything.

Grandi (leaping to his feet)—I did not come here to indulge in polemics. I am leaving!

Lord Plymouth (trying to stop him)—But, Mr. Grandi, I beg of you, not before we have settled the question of the whales!

Grandi—Then tell Maisky to hold his tongue.

Lord Plymouth (severely)—Mr. Maisky, please hold your tongue.

Corbin—Come, my dear Maisky, you really must calm yourself. Nobody else can be heard but you!

Lord Plymouth—This problem, I repeat, is one of extreme importance . . .

Von Ribbentrop (who knows his parliamentary procedure)—In that case, we shall talk about it after our Easter vacation.

Lord Plymouth (in despair)—But think of all the whales that will perish in the meanwhile . . .

Messrs. Grandi, von Ribbentrop and Monteiro (rising as one man)—That is too much!!! (Exeunt, slamming the door.)

Lord Plymouth (smiling)—Oh, well! . . . At last we can get back to our whales. As I was saying . . . (Exeunt Messrs. Corbin and Maisky on tiptoe while Lord Plymouth, carried away by his subject, goes on with his report.)

Richard D. Blackmore

By William Lyon Phelps

Author of 'Lorna Doone.'

Today is the birthday of Richard Doddridge Blackmore, the author of the ever-living romance, "Lorna Doone." He was born June 7, 1825. I suppose every one who reads these lines has read "Lorna Doone."

Hundreds of thousands of American tourists have gone to Devonshire, in southwestern England, to visit the scenes made memorable by this splendid story.

Although he spent nearly all his life near London and died in 1900 very near the great city, he never forgot the western country whose lovely scenery made such an impression on him in his boyhood; and that he remembered with delight Blundell's School at Tiverton is shown by the fact that John Ridd, the hero of his romance, went to that "worthy grammar school, the largest in the west of England, founded and handsomely endowed in the year 1604 by Master Peter Blundell, of that same place, clothier."

Blackmore began his career by producing several volumes of verse; these were followed by two novels which are forgotten. But in 1869 appeared "Lorna Doone." The author was 44 years old. Curiously enough, the book attracted hardly any attention from the reviewers and none at all from the public. It was only after it had been out for nearly two years that it began to attract readers; gradually the ripples became a tidal wave. In the preface to the twentieth edition, the author wrote, "What a lucky maid you are, my Lorna! When first you came from the Western Moors nobody cared to look at you; the 'leaders of the public taste' had none of it to make test of you."

• • • •

After he produced "Lorna Doone," he wrote novels steadily for 30 years, but none was successful. You cannot see the stars after the sunrise.

When I gave a course in Modern Novels at Yale in 1895, I asked the students to vote for their favorite; and "Lorna" won by an impressive majority. I sent the result of the ballot to the author and he wrote me, "The good word of the young, who are at once the most intelligent and the most highly educated of a vast intellectual nation, augurs well for the continuance—at least for a generation—of my fortunate production.

Russia Pushes 3d 5-Year Plan To Surpass U.S.

Planners Speed Drive for Industrialization of Soviets.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 6.—The Soviet Union's third five-year plan, designed this time "to overtake and surpass America," today was taking form in the hands of the nation's industrial leaders.

It probably will go into effect next January 1, immediately on completion of the second five-year plan. Preliminary data indicated there will be no let-up in the intensive, all-absorbing drive to industrialize this technically backward nation within a single generation.

In the offices, drafting rooms and shops of a thousand Soviet trusts and industries the planners were blue-printing the next phase of the industrial future of the sprawling union.

Although the plans which must be submitted to the Kremlin by July 1 are incomplete, figures published indicate the government hopes to accomplish more in the third period than the combined achievements of the first and second five-year plans.

The second plan already has been pronounced a success by Soviet officials.

Expect Population Increase.

The planners assume a population increase of 125,000,000 within the next 25 years to raise the present 175,000,000 to 300,000,000. The Russian birth rate has nearly doubled since the 1936 decree encouraging large families.

The prime goal of the next period will be increase of Russian labor's productivity, still admittedly inefficient when compared with American labor sandards.

"American labor efficiency is two or three times higher than ours," is a frequent declaration of industrial officials who have been sent in a constant stream to the United States to learn about American production.

The Russians already are a little disdainful about the rest of Europe, asserting that in key industries they lead all other European nations.

"Europe can teach us little more; America can teach us much," Anastos Mikoyan, commissar of the food industry, declared when he returned from the United States recently.

Some observers believe this means the Soviet Union will concentrate its buying in the United States during the next five years, turning from Great Britain and Germany. Already there is a trend in that direction.

Hopes to Lead in Gold.

As during the first five-year plans the great emphasis of the third period apparently will be on capital goods construction, transportation, electrification, canal construction, airplanes and automobiles and mining.

The Soviet Union hopes to lead the world in gold, coal and steel production, civil aviation and agricultural production before 1942. Leadership in tractor and threshing combine production already is claimed and airplane production is believed to be ahead of any other country.

Soviet economists expect consumers goods to become more plentiful, better and cheaper in the next five years.

Hitler Declares Germany Is Not Planning War

Secretary Anthony Eden, conducting the British campaign for alleviating the crisis, was to convince Premier Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler that it is not necessary for their warships in Spanish waters to be so quick on the trigger.

Britain's other two suggestions were for the establishment of safety zones in Spanish waters for foreign vessels and for both Spanish factions to give solemn undertakings to respect foreign warships engaged in the committee's patrol.

Otto Watches Attack.

With the Insurgents on the Bilbao Front, June 6 (AP).—Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, claimant of the vacant throne of Austria was an eyewitness today of the resumption of the Spanish insurgents' drive against long-besieged Bilbao.

From a hilltop near the front southeast of Bilbao, the 24-year-old archduke watched insurgent artillery and airplanes showering shells and bombs on the Basque lines near Lewona, 7 miles from the Basque capital.

It was disclosed the Austrian pretender had reached Spain four days ago to visit his uncle, 32-year-old Prince Gaetan, of Bourbon-Parma, recently wounded while fighting in the insurgent ranks.

Another uncle, Prince Xavier, of Bourbon-Parma, accompanied Otto on his tour of the front. Gaetan and Xavier are brothers of Otto's mother, the former Empress Zita, who was a princess of Bourbon-Parma.

The bombardment was the opening phase of a fresh push launched by Gen. Fidel Davila, who succeeded to command of the insurgent northern armies Thursday, when Gen. Emilio Mola was killed in an airplane crash.

Otto saw a fleet of 24 bombers, accompanied by numerous pursuit planes, drop at least 400 bombs on the hills beyond Lemona, while the insurgent batteries farther back shattered defense positions with a bombardment lasting several hours.

The insurgent offensive, suspended after the death of Mola, its directing genius, was resumed vigorously after a conference at Vitoria between Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Davila and other northern generals after they had attended funeral ceremonies for Mola at Burgos.

Franco Names Two Envoys.

Salamanca, Spain, June 6 (AP).—Generalissimo Francisco Franco today announced appointment of ambassadors for insurgent Spain to the two great powers which recognize his regime, Germany and Italy.

To Berlin was assigned Admiral Antonio Magaz, who was vice president of the military directorate when Primo de Rivero was dictator of Spain. Pedro Garcia Conde y Meneses, veteran diplomat, was named ambassador to Rome.

U. S. Scientists Ready to View Eclipse Tomorrow From Pacific

Sun Will Be Obscured for 3 Minutes and 33 Seconds on Island; Three Weeks of Preparations Completed.

The longest sun eclipse in 12 centuries will be watched and photographed tomorrow from tiny Canton Island, in mid-Pacific, by scientists of the National Geographic-Navy expedition, who have completed three weeks of intensive preparations.

The total phase of the eclipse will begin at 7:39 a. m., Canton Island time (2:06 p. m., Eastern Standard time), and will last 3 minutes and 33 seconds. A partial phase of the eclipse will be visible in the United States southwest of a line running approximately from Eureka, Calif., near Amarillo and Wichita Falls, Tex., through Shreveport, La., and on to Tampa and Palm Beach, Fla.

With the best possible luck, a scientist can expect to observe no more than an hour of sun eclipse during his entire life. Since many of the important observations of the sun can be made only during eclipse, everything at Canton Island has been carefully planned—in order that not one of the 213 seconds of darkness will be wasted. Natural color photographs, movies and artist sketches will supplement the black and white photography planned. In a small air-conditioned plant, built for the occasion, the films will be developed immediately.

Members of the eclipse expedition are Dr. S. A. Mitchell, director of the University of Virginia Observatory, Charlottesville, scientific leader; Capt. J. F. Hellweg, superintendent of the U. S. Naval Observatory, Washington, in charge of the Navy's participation; Dr. Paul A. McNally, S. J., director of the Georgetown College Observatory, Washington; Dr. Irvine C. Gardner, National Bureau of Standards, Washington; Dr. F. K. Richtmyer, Cornell University; Dr. Theodore Dunham, jr., Mount Wilson Observatory, California; Charles G. Thompson, Foundation of Astrophysical Research, New York City; John E. Willis, U. S. Naval Observatory; Charles Bittinger, artist, Washington; Richard H. Stewart, staff representative, National Geographic Society, Washington; Walter Brown, radio engineer, New York City; M. S. Adams, radio engineer, San Francisco; George Hicks, radio announcer, New York City, all of N. B. C.; Lieut. Herman A. Gross, U. S. Navy surgeon, Honolulu.

Lieut. T. B. Williamson is in command of the Navy seaplane tender Avocet, which transported the expedition to Canton Island and is anchored offshore. In addition to the expedition from the United States, a party of New Zealand scientists headed by C. B. Mickey, has arrived to observe the phenomenon.

Italy Completes Plans for Two New Battleships

Duce to Order Construction Unless Roosevelt Acts for Disarmament.

Rome, June 6.—Italy is contemplating construction of two more 35,000-ton battleships immediately unless President Roosevelt takes the initiative in convening a world arms limitation conference, it was reported reliably tonight.

Plans for the new battleships, increasing Italy's might in the Mediterranean trouble zone, have just been completed by Italian naval engineers and approved by Premier Mussolini, it was learned reliably today.

Il Duce, angered by the bombing of an Italian naval auxiliary ship, the Barletta, off Palma, Majorca, on May 26 and other international complications of the Spanish civil war, was said to have ordered construction facilities put in readiness for immediate work.

He is withholding the order for actual construction, however, until he determines whether there are possibilities of the United States taking the lead in world disarmament.

Mussolini was described as believing no European country is in a position to take such initiative.

President Roosevelt, he was said to believe, will make a decision on such a disarmament move in "the very near future."

The plans for the two battleships were described as including outstanding improvements over Italy's other two 35,000-ton battleships, the Littoria and Vittorio Veneto, now in the course of construction.

At the same time Italy is rushing to completion a fleet of modern, fast submarines.

Mussolini, it was said, is determined to have 140 submarines in commission within a few months. The Italian navy now has nearly 90 undersea fighting craft.

Disclosure of Mussolini's plans to build two huge fighting ships, at a cost of millions of dollars, came on the eve of the biggest naval review and sea maneuvers in Italian history.

Review for Blomberg.

The review will be held in the Mediterranean, between Naples and Gaeta, tomorrow in honor of Marshal Werner von Blomberg, German minister of war who came to Italy to discuss with Mussolini a plan for "joint armed action" in event of further interference with either Italian or German ships in Spanish waters.

As a result of Blomberg's visit the two Fascist dictators of Europe have agreed upon a "definite defensive entente."

More than 100 units of the Italian fleet will participate in the review, including 70 submarines.

With the review over, Blomberg will have inspected all branches of Italy's fighting services.

Waterway Treaty Put Up to Canada

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said yesterday prospects were "poor" for Senate consideration of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty at this session.

Contending "minor" changes will be necessary to meet objections to the proposal to open the Great Lakes to ocean shipping and harness the potential power of the St. Lawrence, he said the next move was Canada's.

Tricky Tax Evasion Law Forecast by Doughton

Raleigh, N. C., June 6 (AP).—Representative Lee Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, 73-year-old chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted today early passage by Congress of a "tricky" law to end tax evasion.

The measure, Doughton said in an interview, "will have to be tricky because we're up against a tricky crowd—the most unscrupulous men in the country, who can afford to hire the best lawyers in the world."

Voting Machines Urged in House

By the United Press.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, called last night for installation of electrical voting machines in the House of Representatives to "liberalize" Congress and speed legislative action.

"After what happened on the relief bill, I think it is high time we installed a mechanical voting system in the House and have 50 record votes a day if necessary," he said.

He referred to last Tuesday's serio-comic session in which Administration leaders, determined to press their advantage while the Hous was in penitent mood after an "earmarking" revolt, held the chaber in session continuously for nearly 12 hours. About five hours of that time was devoted to voting.

Had voting machines been in use by which members could have recorded their decisions instantly, adjournment would have been at 7 or 8 p. m. instead of just before midnight.

Sen. Bridges Asks Separate Child Labor Bill

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, demanded yesterday the separation of child labor provisions from the Administration's wage and hour bill now being considered by a joint Congressional committee.

Bridges said he will offer amendments to the wage and hour bill eliminating child labor standards and introduce a separate child labor bill this week, which will include "the good features of several bills introduced this session."

He explained his bill would be based on the 1916 child labor law which was invalidated in 1918 by the Supreme Court. He would ban employment of children under 16 years in industry and would prevent persons between 16 and 18 from working in "hazardous industries."

Follows Vandenberg.

Bridges' was the second Republican criticism of the Administration's wage-hour proposal in two days. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, yesterday accused the Administration of "snap-judgment" in striving for enactment of the bill this season.

Bridges declared "there is a great deal of controversy over eliminating child labor. Those sponsoring bills on this subject believe child labor should be considered on its own merits rather than being interwoven in other controversial issues."

The New Hampshire Senator predicted to reporters his proposals would be supported by members of his party in both House and Senate and by "many Democrats in both branches."

The move to split the Administration bill in the House is led by the Assistant Republican floor leader, Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Republican Representatives Halleck, of Indiana; White, of Ohio, and Jenkins, of Ohio. Bridges said one of them would introduce a similar bill and amendments to the wage and hour bill in that branch.

Seeks Three-Man Board.

A separate child labor act, he said, would provide for a three-man board—the Attorney General and Secretaries of Labor and Commerce—to make "uniform regulations for carrying out the act's provisions" and should ban from interstate shipment any goods on which child labor was employed 30 days prior to shipment.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization and friend of most of the Administration's labor policies, will take the joint committee's witness stand today.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, recently gave the committee qualified approval of the Administration proposal for Federal regulation of wages and hours.

"Not True Sentiment."

Rejection by the Connecticut Legislature of the child labor amendment does not represent accurately sentiment of that State, Labor's Nonpartisan League said in a statement last night. The statement:

"Althought the Connecticut State Legislature rejected the child labor amendment by a vote of 2 to 1, the actual sentiment in the State was exactly the reverse. The representatives who voted in favor of the ratification of the amendment represented more than twice as many people as did the legislators who voted against the amendment, and those favoring the amendment received in the 1936 election almost three times as many votes as did the legislators who opposed the child labor amendment.

"The 174 representatives who voted against the amendment represented only 28 per cent of the people on the voting list of the State, and were elected by only 25 per cent of the votes cast for State representatives. Unequal distribution of legislative votes in the State of Connecticut is therefore directly responsible for the defeat of the child labor amendment. These and other significant facts illustrating the obstacles to the child labor or any other constitutional amendment are set forth in a study of the Connecticut vote just completed for Labor's Nonpartisan League by Mr. William S. Gordon, jr., member of the graduating class of the Yale Law School."

D. C. Worse Than Swamplands, Says Perspiring Capt. Eldredge

Capt. I. F. Eldredge, of the Agriculture Department, came to Washington yesterday with the mud of Southern swamps brushed off his shoes and related some of the things a man will encounter if he walks on a compass line for 900 miles without digressing an inch.

The captain didn't walk the straight line just to find out what he would chance upon. He was engaged, with a large crew, in a timber inventory which in nearly three years has covered 215,000,000 acres, an aggregate of 34,000 miles, and some of the worst swamps and moonshining lands of lower Georgia.

The captain and his crew have been in mud up to their necks, have been where they could neither walk nor swim, where they could not sleep, have been fired upon with long rifles, have been attacked by bulldogs, have been taken for escaped felons from an Oklahoma jailbreak, but having started out in the extreme Eastern United States, they wound up, dad-blame-it, like men on the plains of Texas. And now the captain, a vigorous-talking, witty and determined man, leaves Tuesday to rejoin his crew and westward, ho, with the line and let the bulldogs bite.

Complains of D. C. Heat.

The captain, taking off his coat and complaining Washington is hotter than New Orleans and that "I nearly fell dead with the heat here yesterday," said "if you wonder what we chanced upon, just picture for yourself all the freakish situations in the world and you'll have it." He explained that the lines ran east to west every 10 miles through certain areas, and the crew would pause every 660 feet and begin work on a quarter-acre plot. They would count the trees, consider the height and volume and the rate of growth. They would get a lot of other data. Another group canvassed the rate of use of the trees. From all the data they would have the Southern timber resources pretty well estimated.

Now what did the captain encounter? Consider first that some of the lines ran for 900 miles, straighter than any crow could fly. "We crossed every river and swamp of the South," recalled the captain. "We ran across snakes and cows and bullfrogs. In the West we would have run across buffalo, had there been any. We ran across everything but exotic animals. In one swampy land we had to carry the baggage in ox carts, and the oxen had to swim the rivers."

Boats Had Tough Going.

"Down in the Grand Lake country of Louisiana, we couldn't swim the boggy, brush-lined rivers and we couldn't walk them. We had a hard time in motorboats. Oftimes the crew stood in mud up to their necks. A few miles on we'd run straight into somebody's back yard and be attacked by a bulldog. Once we ran a line straight through a moonshining still. The line stretched between the worm and mash barrel. We were fired upon. We would run into clothes lines and flush against houses.

"But we swung one line from Brunswick, Ga., straight to Post Oaks, Tex., and Bill David, 26, one-time heavyweight boxing champion at the University of Georgia, was on the line from start to finish. I say finish. The line is now at Post Oaks. We'll swing it out soon. There're 25,000,000 acres to be done in Texas and about 10,000,000 in Oklahoma.

"A tight jam on one line in Oklahoma," recalled the captain. "They had a jailbreak there and the sheriff got after us in the woods."

London to Act Today on Flight Of Gold to U. S.

Dealers' Action to Tell If Scared Unloading Will Continue.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

New York, June 6.—A group of men will meet in London's Throgmorton street tomorrow morning and their action will tell whether the frightened unloading of hoarded gold has been completed.

These men—leading bullion dealers in London—constitute the official gold market and it is their daily task around 10 a. m. to fix the day's gold price. The heavy dumping of gold on the official market in the last week has been the signal for international nervousness.

During the week a total of $59,370,000 in gold was sold at the official price—a record amount—and the difficulty was in finding a buyer since hoarded gold holdings from Holland, Switzerland and other European countries had suddenly come out of hiding through fears the gold price might be changed.

Worry Over America.

The price dropped to 140 shillings 3½ pence, bringing a wide discount between the London price and the price of $35 an ounce paid by the United States Treasury. But only the British equalization fund appeared willing to buy.

The chief fear is that the United States will change its gold policy. President Roosevelt Friday gave an element of cheer by announcing that no change was imminent, but even that has not completely eliminated the nervousness.

During the week $47,038,000 in gold was engaged abroad for shipment to the United States. This brought a total of $609,871,000 engaged since the tripartite agreement for shipment to this country.

The American monetary gold holdings now total more than $12,000,000,000, while the inactive gold fund on Saturday rose to a total of $607,832,082. This inactive fund is greater than the gold holdings of any nation with exception of Great Britain and France.

Thus, the frightened gold holders ask, how can the United States continue to absorb this enormous amount of gold?

The Treasury has indicated no change in its policy, but abroad the rumors prevail that the tripartite signatories soon will issue a statement on gold. Abroad there is the feeling that efforts are being made for international stabilization of gold at $35 an ounce—thus freeing the United States from being the chief buyer.

It was disclosed today that "suggestions" from high authority had convinced film company officials their customers, still in a spiritual glow over the coronation pictures, would not care for anything so trivial as a wedding. News reel executives met and decided to junk the films which had been taken at Monts and hastened to England at great expense.

Gerald Sanger, of British Movietone News, explained:

"It was felt that to release films of the wedding might reawaken painful emotions and even lead to invidious demonstrations in the theaters."

Anyway, he continued, the wedding pictures weren't so good. "They were merely animated facsimilies of the photographs that appeared in the press."

only highway to happiness and security."

He commented on the great increase in the number of peace organizations now active and urged the W. C. T. U. to work with them to "pit your will" against the false concepts that train "youth to feel that the true purpose of life is to serve to the death on the battlefield of one's country."

Speakers at last night's session, held at Constitution Hall, were Lady Aurea Howard MacLeod and Maj. Thomas MacLeod, of England, whose subjects were "Why I Am a Teetotaler" and "Alcohol and Aviation," respectively; Miss Lucille Elaine Hinshaw, of the University of Oklahoma, who spoke on "Not Caught by Liquid Lures," and Robert B. Marriott, of Rochester, N. Y., on "We Accept Today's Challenge."

Youth Not "Suckers."

Young people of America resent "being played for suckers," Miss Hinshaw declared. "Numerous agencies apparently are trying to outdo each other in bidding for the youth of the United States to become the future market for the breweries and liquor interests of this land."

Twenty-five million dollars were spent for liquor advertising in America last year, according to Miss Hinshaw, who said that such advertising banks on one thing alone—"the widespread ignorance of what alcohol is and what it does."

"Remove this ignorance," she said, "and this vast advertising campaign is futile.

"The right-thinking youth of the United States are interested in building a better world. • • • We refuse to be caught by 'liquor lures.'"

Miss Esther Y. Sing, of China, explained the New Life Movement of her country and declared it emphasizes temperance.

"A feast of a non-Christian was never considered proper without wine and cigarettes before the new movement, which was started by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek. But now it is quite common to entertain without wine.

Speak in Churches.

"In schools, students are not permitted to drink or smoke, and smoking is not allowed on the streets. This movement is strictly enforced in schools and in the army and navy, as well as in official circles."

Convention delegates and visitors spoke in numerous churches of Washington and nearby towns yesterday morning.

Mrs. Devine Wallace, of Paisley, Scotland, speaking at the Wallace Memorial Presbyterian Church, declared there "is no age limit in the kingdom of God."

"Our greatest problem today, as I see it," she said, "is overcoming the psychology of statements to the effect that we can never have complete prohibition. Perhaps we cannot, but we can keep trying. In Scotland, I am happy to report, the saloon interests are getting shaky."

Final rehearsal for "Souls Courageous," pageant with which the convention will end, will be held tonight. More than 500 players will have parts. Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, of the District of Columbia, is in charge, assisted by Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, Mrs. Caroline McKinley Ashbrook, Mrs. Ethel H. Reed and others.

The pageant is in three main parts. Katherine Wilfley, of Washington, will appear as Frances E. Willard, principal character. Organ and choral music has been arranged by Mrs. Ethel Harris Reed, with Lyman McCrary as organist. The Rubenstein Club, Takoma Park Presbyterian Church choir and other singing groups will participate.

Mrs. de Cuevas 'Laughs Heartily' At 25 Million Gift

Florence, Italy, June 6 (U.P.).—Mrs. Margaret Strong de Cuevas, 39-year-old granddaughter of John D. Rockefeller, today said "there must be some mistake" when informed she had inherited the bulk of the financier's $25,000,000 residuary estate.

Mrs. de Cuevas, wife of a nobleman once reported to have been associated in business with Prince Youssoupoff, who helped kill the "Mad Monk" Rasputin, arrived here today from Paris with her husband and a valet.

They said they had received no official notification of the bequest and that they had not heard from Rockefeller since their marriage 11 years ago.

"There must be some mistake," said Mrs. de Cuevas, whose mother, Bessie Rockefeller Strong, was the oil magnate's daughter. "When we first heard the news we laughed heartily."

Farm Girl Wives Found A-1 Divorce Insurance

Oklahoma City, June 6 (A.P.).—Buxom country girls are "A-1 insurance" against divorce, Dr. W. A. McKeever, psychologist, told the Lovers Church today.

"Certain types of marriage will be rated as safe risks," he said. "For example, the man who has the good judgment to cast about among available farm women and will single out one who is trained in all kinds of work will get an A-1 insurance risk.

"The unmarried city man, who can speak at least a smattering of the farm language, should motor into the country regularly for a few Sundays with an eye to spying out a buxom country girl for a wife."

Diplomats to Lecture In U. S. Summer Schools

State Department Officials Also Take Discussion Assignments; Spanish Envoy Going Home.

There's a busy summer ahead for several Ambassadors and State Department officials—as lecturers. Universities all over the country are lining up foreign envoys to speak on international relations at various summer sessions and round-table discussions.

One of South America's outstanding political figures, the Brazilian Ambassador, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, will speak at Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa., on July 8 at its summer session. The envoy will discuss historical relations between Brazil and the United States. There exists no better authority on present relations between the two countries than this picturesque envoy and former gaucho, who, with his five brothers, was one of the moving spirits of the revolution of 1930. Aranha is a close friend of President Vargas of Brazil, who has announced—somewhat to everybody's surprise—that he does not choose to run again in the autumn elections. There were rumors that Aranha would succeed him, but the Ambassador stated recently that he wasn't interested.

The brilliant young chief of the newly created Division of American Republics of the State Department, Mr. Lawrence Duggan, is also scheduled to speak at the Bucknell summer session. Still in his early thirties, he was chief of the Latin American division until it was renamed following the general shake-up when Sumner Welles was made Undersecretary of State and Mr. R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department.

Mr. Duggan will leave on Thursday or Friday for Ohio, where he will open the Summer Institute at Oberlin College. His general topic is expected to be Latin American affairs.

(Note: Mr. and Mrs. Duggan are recently the parents of a 6-pound girl, born on Friday at Georgetown University Hospital. Mrs. Duggan, the former Helen Boyd, is as brilliant as her husband. A Vassar graduate, she formerly worked in the Sugar Code Division of the NRA, then went into Federal Housing Administration after the Blue Eagle was abolished.)

The Institute of Public Affairs at Charlottesville, Va., has secured the services as lecturer of Senor Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, Cuban Ambassador to Washington. Dr. Fraga will go July 4 to take part in the program of the forum for round-table discussions which is sponsored annually by the University of Virginia.

One of the outstanding speakers in his native country will be lost to Washington temporarily when the Spanish Ambassador, Senor Dr. Don Fernando de los Rios, sails Wednesday for a diplomatic conference at Valencia. As a member of the Spanish Cortes, he gained a reputation as one of the most brilliant orators in Spain. The Ambassador also gave lectures during a session at Columbia University several years ago.

The GENTLER SEX

Topic of the Day.

Mrs. Twitter—Well, I'm certainly glad Edward and Mrs. Simpson—I mean Mrs. Warfield—got married at last. I never was so sick of reading about anything in my life.

Mrs. Burlap—I can't see why the papers print so much about them.

Miss Minch—Honestly, if I hear that woman's name again, I'll go mad. Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Puffer? Did you have a good time at the coronation?

Mrs. Puffer—Perfectly wonderful! And then, of course, I went over to France——

Mrs. Twitter—Oh, did you see Wally—I mean the Duchess of Windsor?

Mrs. Puffer—Well, no, I didn't exactly see her, though I fully intended to. I kept telling Mr. Puffer all the time I really should call up Wallis—you know my people have known her people for years. I probably could have gone to the wedding . . . but of course we were so rushed, and then Mr. Puffer is so peculiar about those things.

Mrs. Chumley—You know, I used to know her in Baltimore—well, just as well as I know you. Bessie—we all called her Bessie—and I virtually grew up together. That is, we were in the same set.

Mrs. Burlap—Well, she's always been just like one of our family—you know, she's my husband's fifth cousin by marriage. Of course, I don't say that I approve of some of the things she's done—now, going on that Mediterranean cruise with the King was very indiscreet——

Mrs. Dummitt—Oh, but they had chaperones!

Mrs. Burlap—But, as I was going to say, just the same, if I go abroad this summer, I'm certainly going to look her up. I think her friends ought to stand by her.

Mrs. Chumley—Well, I really ought to have sent her a little wedding present—a card, or something.

Mrs. Puffer—Well, now that it's all over, I certainly hope she gets a little peace and that people'll stop talking.

Miss Wiggle—That's what I say. But you know the thing that keeps puzzling me is, what is it she's GOT?

Miss Minch—Well, if I spent as much time in a beauty shop——

Mrs. Flytie—They say she has such a wonderful figure. Well, I just checked up on her measurements. They're EXACTLY the same as mine.

Mrs. Chumley—What a marvelous print dress, Mrs. Puffer! Did you get it in London? You know, I'd give anything if I could wear prints.

Miss Minch—Prints make me look so blah.

Miss Wiggle—They say the Duchess of Windsor has simply scads of prints in her trousseau.

Mrs. Tootle—Honestly, I'm so sick of hearing about all her clothes—though I do say that being as she got them it was a shame she could not have a REAL wedding.

Mrs. Posey—That old Archbishop of Canterbury makes me sick.

Mrs. Burlap—Well, of course, somebody has to uphold the traditions of society. After all—and I say this even though she is my husband's fifth cousin—you'll have to admit she was a divorced woman.

Mrs. Dummitt—Oh, but it wasn't her fault! Look at the way her husband had acted.

Mrs. Tootle—Well, what I say is—nobody has a right to deny LOVE.

Mrs. Flint—Love and marriage are two different things.

Mrs. Tootle—Well, it doesn't seem right to me that just because she liked a king, she didn't have a right to love and marry like the rest of us.

Miss Minch—Well, she's already had two husbands—that's more than some of the rest of us——

Mrs. Posey—It was all that hateful old Baldwin!

Mrs. Twitter—Well, I say Edward had suffered enough already. They ought to have let him had a wedding. Especially after he'd been so good to the miners and everything.

Mrs. Flint—Well, he's getting well paid for it—out of the miners' wages.

Miss Minch—Do you really think you'll go abroad this summer, Mrs. Burlap?

Mrs. Burlap—We were planning on it—until Mr. Burlap got so scared there'd be a war or something.

Mrs. Tootle—Oh, they say if there is a war the Duke and Duchess of Windsor will come to America!

Mrs. Chumley—Well, if they do, I certainly think everybody ought to be nice to them. Especially their old friends.

Mrs. Flint—Well, that it's all over now, I guess everybody will begin talking about the Supreme Court again.

Mrs. Dummitt—Well, I don't think we ought to have a dictator in this country. Oh, what a perfectly adorable handkerchief, Mrs. Puffer!

Mrs. Tootle—Is that Wallis blue?

An Exclusive Wardrobe of Hats for the Mid-Season

A romantic wide brim profile hat in burnt wheat color with grosgrain trimming in rust and green (right). The artistic hat below, designed by Louise Bourbon, Paris, is fashioned of pale blue toyo panama, piped with soft green velvet; an Oriental poppy of shirred starched organdy dominates the wide brim. The black toque is made of cellophane straw and cire satin ribbon; designed by Louise-sanders.

Styles in Hats Widely Varied This Summer

Materials and Designs Alike Include Great Range, Expert Declares.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHAT IS THE predominant hat style this summer? The correct answer is just about everything that answers to the definition of a head covering. There never was a time when hats were so accommodating in their styling. They range from crownless affairs with wide brims to brimless toques, turbans, flat-crowned wide or narrow brims, high-crowned hats with brims of all sizes. The possibilities for selecting an individual and varied hat wardrobe are endless.

Materials Are Varied.

The mediums for interpreting this many-sided hat mode are as diverse as the designing ideas. There are straws, rough and smooth, transparent and opaque, conventional and exotic, in all the colors of the spectrum. The trimmings, too, are equally as original and individual—from chapeaux noted for smart simplicity to those piled with flowers, fruit, or surrealistic motifs. Silks, cottons, cellophane strips and straw cloth, also fashion many of the midseason models.

A hat wardrobe to see you around the clock from dawn until dawn, is imperative in the current designs for chic grooming. The time has passed when one or even two hats will see you through a season, as they have become that important in the accessory realm. With the basic dress idea gaining impetus daily, hats are called upon to change the character of the costume for different occasions. Also each costume now flaunts its accompanying hat, something designed especially to accent it.

Hats for All Occasions.

For general daytime wear, there are specially created chapeaux—simple affairs in wide, narrow, crownless or brimless, interpretations, with a minimum of trimming. Headgear which accompanies the cocktail or garden party frock is obviously more complicated. Many of such hats are loaded with flowers, ribbon bows and other trimming. For dinner and informal evenings, the turban and toque lead in prestige. Huge cartwheels with simple grosgrain bows and decorative motifs, top smart afternoon costumes of the informal type.

While the American tendency is to match hat to frock, the Parisian designers are sponsoring color in their millinery, to lend a brilliant accent to dark costumes. For example, a poudre blue cartwheel of straw may offset an all-black frock, or one of pale champagne or dusty pink in novelty straw, may accent a frock in solid dark colors or prints with a dark ground. A creation that is popular on both sides of the Atlantic is the dark or light-colored hat ornamented with a wide chiffon scarf with trailing ends.

Pies Run Over.

Fruit pies are likely to "run over" during baking. To prevent the drippings from becoming scorched and leaving a burned odor in the kitchen place a pan directly under the pie. The pan, which may easily be washed, will catch the drippings.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married a little over 10 months. My husband and I are both 29 and both of us work. He has a good position which offers opportunities for real advancement. Before we were married he said that he would turn over to me all of his salary above what he needed for personal expenses; that I could "manage" it as I saw fit. We were to divide equally the expenses of the apartment. Also, at the time we were married I felt he would be bale to assume my entire support in time, so that I would not need to continue working the rest of my life.

• • • •

However, he did not live up to his original agreement. Not once. After paying his half of the household expenses, quietly pocketed the remainder of his salary. I was surprised and deeply hurt, but said nothing, thinking that later he would suggest a more co-operative budget plan. But he new did. In an effort to excuse him to myself, I decided he probably thought I had enough money of my own and did not need his. But something has happened to show matters in a much worse light.

• • • •

I have been given a two weeks' leave of absence without pay from my office, and may have to take two weeks more later in the summer. On top of this, I have been faced with an unexpectedly large doctor's bill. My expenses go on just the same and as a result my finances are in a dire state. Not long ago my husband received his first raise in pay since we were married, and I waited anxiously to see where I could "figure." But I didn't "figure" at all. He went on just the same.

• • • •

Though he knows my financial difficulties, he ignores them. I know now quite definitely that he feels no financial responsibility whatever toward me. It is this realization, as much as money side of it, which hurts me so deeply. I can't find words to express my great disappointment. Moreover, I feel an ever-growing resentment toward him which I find it impossible to control.

• • • •

Perhaps you wonder why I have kept quiet all this time. Why I do not try to do something about it. I do want to, but what can I do? It is repulsive to think of trying to coerce a man into doing something he should wish to do of himself, and the thought of wresting money from a reluctant husband is equally repugnant. He sends his mother money each month and has no other responsibilities. I am sure he does not go out with other women, nor does he drink to any extent. Thank you in advance for any advice you may give me. ZELDA.

Have Business-Like Talk.

DEAR ZELDA: The time has come, as the walrus said, to talk of many things with your husband. There is no other approach to a settlement of this disagreeable bone of contention. Talk to him with the same cool matter-of-factness you would employ in calling to account a partner who had failed of his promises in a business enterprise. Leave sentiment, sorrow and disappointment out of the discussion in firing the opening gun. Let him have it straight that he is driving a sharp bargain which has become entirely too sharp to tolerate.

• • • •

Ask him if he realizes that as a married man he has a legal obligation to supply his wife with the necessities of life, which include food, clothing, shelter and medical care. Remind him of that verbal contract made before marriage, according to which you were to be treasurer of the family income. Tell him the family accounts are in a bad way—owing to circumstances outside your control—and ask him what he proposes to do about it. Ask him if his unconcern is based on lack of knowledge, thoughtless indifference or pure selfishness. Tell him that unless he has a better plan to suggest, you have decided to let him finance the household from now on, while reserving your own accumulated and current earnings for your own purely personal needs, such as doctors' bills, clothing, cosmetics and other feminine incidentals.

• • • •

I firmly believe that any husband, though his wife is employed, is rightfully obligated to pay the full household maintenance expenses, if his salary is sufficient to cover the same. What his wife earns, if the couple have a sensibly co-operative attitude in budget matters, may be banked, spent for luxuries to be mutually enjoyed, or used to meet her own personal expenses, depending upon the proportionate size of her income. I think it an all-around mistake for a professional or business woman to accustom her husband to any other arrangement from the very start.

Since men are, very largely, creatures of habit where marital arrangements are concerned, the husband who gets the "feel," so to speak, of a domestic set-up which offers all the comfort, convenience and consolation of marriage, with all too little of its financial responsibilities, is not at all apt to make voluntary efforts to change the situation. He may even resist such a change when and if suggested by the put-upon party of the second part. But in a circumstance of this kind (as in all others) it is never too late to do better; and since it was you, the wife, who erred in consenting to such a plan in the first place, it now behooves you to take the initiative in substituting a better one.

• • • •

This, I believe, can only be done by arming yourself with a convincing array of facts and figures; with a calmly forceful definition of your husband's undeniable obligations, and with a cool statement to the effect that, since he has made an accounting necessary, you expect to conduct it on an absolutely unsentimental, business-like and self-protective basis. I think such an approach will bring far speedier and happier results than any amount of hurt reproach and pained silence. It may even bring you a surprising increase of husbandly respect and devotion, as well as a wider spending margin. M. H.

Hearts and Flowers Are Popular Theme For Dress Prints

New York, (AP).—Hearts and flowers are the sentimental theme of some new dress prints for summer.

Successors to the "amour, amour" prints that followed the abdication of King Edward VIII, the heart and flower dresses carry on the romantic note of last spring.

Janet Hollander, the young designer, showed in her new collection several frocks that mixed floral patterns and heart motifs, and many in "garden prints."

A season or so ago, Miss Hollander put heart-shaped pockets on sports dresses.

Sleeves are short, and skirts have width, in pleated sections, all-around pleats or flakes. Sheer blouse often are trimmed daintily with shirrings, cordings or pleats.

Squeeze With Ricer.

When preparing hot applications, place the cloth in an open potato ricer and hold under the hot water faucet, letting the cloth become saturated. Then squeeze together the handles of the potato ricer and the cloth will be wrung out without burning the hands.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Babies' Milk.

The baby's first summer used to be dangerous, but it no longer is terrifying to the young mother, and this is largely because of the crusade for pure milk.

While the crusade for pure milk was started by the milk industry in the middle of the 1900s, the big impetus to modern milk sanitation came with the introduction of pasteurization.

From the time in 1893, when pasteurization was first used in the United States to destroy harmful bacteria that might get into milk, to the present day, the story of pure milk is a record of continuous progress.

As knowledge of pasteurization spread, Government, State and local health officials, co-operating with milk distributors and producers, made possible a milk supply that is a vital factor in safeguarding the Nation's health.

Pasteurization also helped speed developments of the far-reaching American system of daily distribution of milk, now unquestionably the finest in the world.

In 1901, three years before pasteurization of milk became compulsory in New York, 3,598 children under five years of age died of diarrheal disease during the three summer months, July, August and September. By 1920 the number of such summer deaths had been reduced to 1,280; in 1930 they were 302 and in 1935 only 136.

"There is no doubt," Health Commissioner John L. Rice said recently, "that a large part of this splendid showing should be credited to the pasteurization of the city's milk supply."

Other cities where pasteurization of milk is required show comparable records in the reduction of infant mortality. While pure water, as well as pure milk, has also been a factor; to the milk industry and health officials today's scientifically safeguarded milk supply is an accomplishment of the first order.

The value of a dependable milk supply to a community is graphically epitomized by Dr. J. H. Collins, deputy health commissioner of Schenectady, who says that "1,007 babies are alive in our city today who would have died if the 1910 rate had prevailed until 1936.

"Still within the memory of the older citizens," Dr. Collins continued, "the price of a quart of milk was about one-half of what it is today.

Vacation Study Of City Children Needs Planning

They had the old swimming hole, plenty of shaded streets and pleasant groves, and meadows.

But many pupils of the modern Little Red School House, a progressive elementary institution in downtown New York City, have no such advantages for summer comfort. Like thousands of other city children, their well being depends on the forethought of their parents and advisers.

The problem concerns Miss Elizabeth Irwin, the school's principal, and she has figured out a system.

The city child should play outdoors, she believes, only until the sun gets high. Then he should retreat inside. For city buildings usually are startlingly cool in contrast to the glare of the streets.

Summer can be made profitable, even if it's a period of leisure for children, Miss Irwin holds. She suggests pottery classes, perhaps music lessons—which are difficult to fit into the crowded school schedule—or maybe a little practice in cooking.

"Let boys as well as girls learn to cook simple meals," she says. "Even if it's nothing more than preparation for a tea party, or a picnic lunch, children can make lemonade, ice cream or sandwiches, and learn a lot while they're planning their party.

"There ought to be some routine during the summer. Children miss it, though subconsciously. They should get up at regular hours, not sleep all morning. They should have a lighter diet, including plenty of liquids. Their hot meal should be eaten at some time other than during the heat of midday."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 6.—I don't suppose there is anything that forrows our cheeks and grays our thatches any quicker than sitting in at the graduation exercises of a prep school for boys and girls. This melancholy truth was hammered home last week when I walked into the beautiful country outside Darien, Conn., to see my pet niece, Barbara, get her sheepskin at the Cherry Lawn School.

ALICE HUGHES.

The incredible youthfulness of the whole thing caused me to, totter visibly, and reach for an imaginary walking cane. The sweet girl graduates in their crisp organdy—the slick-haired lads, highly conscious of the razorlike creases in their ice-cream pants—Barbara standing up to speak her little graduation piece on fond memories of bright school years now departed—it was all too much for a hard-working reporter of a certain age.

Even more upsetting was the hilarity of the picnics on the tree-shaded lawns, with each graduate surrounded by doting parents, aunts, uncles and family friends. And then the frantic rushing and screaming of going-away time—shrieks of "on't forget to write, Babs, dear!" —the hum of the departing motors as school ties were busted forever. All charming, but inclined to cover the eyes with an unaccustomed mist, and I suffered a severe attack of weltschmerz as I rocked quietly on the front porch amid the hilarious din of young humans unleashed.

And it wasn't until I got back to my Murray Hill mirror and found no more crows' feet than usual that I returned from a sort of spiritual senility. Delightful occasion—but hardly a place and time for a sentimentalist, I'm afraid!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of the greatest blows for feminine freedom struck since the abolition of the bustle by constitutional amendment has been delivered in our charming suburban City of Yonkers. By court decree our girls are now permitted to hike through its chaste highways in shorts—a heinous offense which landed several of them in the local bastile last summer. Thousands of them, backed by a court ruling, now visit the town thus attired on fine Sundays, just to sneer at the thwarted constables! . .

• • • •

The most-loved and most mysterious actress of her day, Maude Adams, has moved to her secluded cottage in the Catskills for the summer, taking along the little group of retainers who have been with her for years. Hugh Reilly, who has worked for Miss Adams for 35 years, tells me she is still beautiful at 64—"not a wrinkle, and not a trace of gray in her auburn hair!" . . .

• • • •

Scouting among the great horde of our brides-elect, or wives-designate, I find that one of the most popular didoes for them this year is the cosmetics shower. Thus they are provided with enough creams and scents and such to keep them alluring for a couple of years. Then, I suppose, it is every girl for herself.

I needn't tell you that it is a well-known fact that men are now taking better care of their hair than ever before—all these horrifying bald-headed advertisements are largely responsible. Now my scalp specialist friend, Mona Merle, adds a new thought to the matter, and you can pass it on to the boys. She says that if men changed their hair styles as often as women do, there would be less depressing skull-nudity among them. But just try to get him to part his hair on the other side!

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

NOTHING sets a lady up like fresh flowers under her chin. We always stop for a bunch of violets or a gardenia when we want to make an "appearance" in last year's suit.

It's the same way with a room this year; the smartest decorators are botany-minded. We enjoyed so much seeing a dining room recently exhibited by a young man who sets styles in interiors.

White walls to begin with, three of which are completely covered in panels of flower and fruit prints framed in green and hung close together from dado to ceiling. The fourth wall, with a bay window, has a green trellis criss-crossed over the entire wall space around the window, then a big white wire bird-cage stands in the curve of the bay window.

The chairs have upholstered seats and backs covered in floral needlepoint with an off white ground. They'd be a lot of work to be sure, but you'd have heirlooms when you finished with them. If you don't feel up to needlepoint, quilted off ground floral linen seats and backs are interesting.

For the floor this room had a hand knotted embossed rug in natural color, but for a more practical room we'd suggest a plain green rug of distinctive weave.

Georgian furniture was used to advantage in this floral setting and gave a feeling of dignity to what might otherwise have seemed a frivolous scene. Conversey this botany background lightened and refreshed the effect of the fine Sheraton sideboard and console.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the writer's new bulletin, "Recipes for New Wall Colors." This tells the names of colors to mix to get the subtle background colors that decorators have originated.

Pollution Control Agreement Sought

A drive for legislation at this session of Congress to control stream pollution neared its final stage yesterday with members of the Senate Commerce Committee seeking to reconcile wide differences among advocates of pollution control.

Chairman Hattie Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, of a Commerce sub-committee, arranged to present the results of hearings on two pending bills, and expressed hope the full committee would approve the Barkley-Vinson bill passed by the House.

Senator Augustine Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, indicated, however, he would insist on further consideration of his bill to authorize Federal direction of pollution control.

Monkey Docility Proves Value Of Brain Operation for Man

Wild Animal Becomes Calm, Gentle; Human Disorders Can Be Similarly Relieved, Medical Association Hears.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 6.—Two monkeys living side by side in cages at an exhibition before the American Medical Association demonstrated today the striking changes achieved by two Washington physicians from a brain operation to relieve some forms of severe human mental distress.

Both were wild monkeys obtained from India. The first, which had not been operated on, was a typical animal which showed extreme aggressiveness, fear and anxiety whenever a person approached its cage. This behavior, according to Dr. Walter Freeman and Dr. James W. Watts, of George Washington University, who presented the exhibit, is typical of the mental state of many human beings whose minds are severely upset.

The second monkey had been operated on about two months ago and was, as one physician expressed it, "as serene and peaceful as a calm old man." He was friendly and allowed himself to be petted, showed no desire to bite or fight, came calmly forward to greet his visitors and appeared interested in everything about him. This monkey, Dr. Freeman declared, typifies the result obtained from the brain operation on human beings.

The operation itself is not a difficult one, he explained, and is performed under a local anesthesia of the scalp. It consists of boring two holes in the skull on the sides of the head just back of the normal hairline. A special instrument is then inserted into the white matter in the prefrontal lobes of the brain which lie just back of the forehead. Three "cores" of brain tissue are then cut on each side, much as a housewife cuts the core from an apple. These cores are not removed, but their connection with the rest of the brain is severed.

The result has been "astonishing" in the behavior of many human beings, Dr. Freeman said, just as it has been with the monkeys. Persons who were under nervous tension and apprehension, entertained suicidal ideas, had constant delusions and obsessions and hysterical paralysis came out of the operation as calm persons with orderly minds who were again self-contained and able to reason normally.

More than 25 persons have been operated on thus far with only two deaths, one of which resulted four months after operation from other causes, the physicians declared. They added they had operated only on extreme neurotic cases which had failed to benefit from other treatment.

The medical association was scheduled to begin its five-day scientific sessions tomorrow, with about 10,000 physicians in attendance.

Pencil Cap Is Flown Across U. S. to Aid Boy

Los Angeles, June 6 (AP).—an airplane brought a small lead pencil cap across the continent from New York today on a flight that may save a 12-year-old boy's life.

Andrew Blakeley, jr., swallowed the cap of his pencil while in school at Van Nuys last Thursday. It passed down his windpipe into his right lung. Surgeons tried to remove it by means of a bronchoscope and failed. They said they needed a similar cap so that they might fashion an instrument that would screw into the imprisoned cap. Efforts to find a similar cap failed. Finally one was found in New York.

Philippine Leaders Oppose Independence

Manila, June 6 (AP).—The Bulletin said today Negros Island sugar planters have disclosed a movement to request continuation of the Commonwealth government by the United States. The paper said leaders are "coming out frankly to express their belief that the Philippines, judging from present conditions, cannot maintain an independent existence."

Amando Avancena, prominent planter, and Dr. Jose Mirasol, technical adviser of the Confederation of Sugar Cane Planters, were quoted as saying the confederation is preparing a resolution requesting the United States to amend the independence act and continue the Commonwealth.

Localities to Pay 22 Pct. of Relief

By the Associated Press.

WPA officials said yesterday they would require localities to pay about 22 per cent of the cost of relief projects in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

At present the localities pay 16 per cent of the cost, the officials added.

A $1,500,000,000 relief bill is now going through Congress. However, the WPA men said that not more than $1,337,000,000 would be available for WPA work relief, the rest going to the National Youth Administration, Resettlement Administration and other activities.

Under the new requirements, localities would add about $350,000,000 to the work relief fund, bringing the total to approximately $1,687,000,000.

Bob Burns Says:

I only had one relative that ever left home to go out in the world and make good and that was my Cousin Milford.

Everybody around home thought he'd never amount to much. He said he was goin' to the city where his talents could spread. As the years went by and his parents got a lot of consolation out of knowin' that it was because he was so taken up with heavy business affairs.

Finally one night, 14 years later, his parents was sittin' in front of the fire thinkin' about their successful son, when they got a letter from him. They tore it open and the letter says: "Deer Maw and Paw: I am comin' home at last. Meet me at the old Mill Bridge at midnight. Bring a shirt, coat, and a pair of pants—I've got a hat."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Journey's End.

We make no claims to clairvoyance, nor even to prescience—but all the same we're going to state with the greatest certainty the destination of a certain letter that was sent out by a Washington organization the other day.

First, we'll state the letter and then you take one guess at where it landed:

"My dear President Stengle:

"Our committee (the Committee Against False Economy) has arranged a meeting to present the case against the false economy drive. It will be held in the large ballroom of the Willard Hotel, Thursday evening, June 10.

"We hope that you will attend and express your opposition to such an economy drive. Will you please advise us if you will attend so that we may arrange our program accordingly? Sincerely and fraternally yours,

"ARTHUR STEIN, Chairman."

We say with the greatest certainty that it landed in a big waste basket. This, of course, is the correct guess because in the meantime—that is, since the letter was mailed—Col. Stengle has suspended the seven lodges that compose the Committee Against False Economy. So the answer is "No!"

Postmaster General James A. Farley announces that on July 13 a special commemorative postage stamp will be issued in connection with the 150th anniversary of the Adoption of the Ordinance of 1787 and the establishment of the Northwest Territory. The new stamp will be of 3-cent denomination. The Postoffice Department will later announce details of design, color and size.

Notes.

Change of name: Since June 1, that part of the Farm Credit Administration previously known as the Loan Service Section is referred to as the Mortgage Corporation Service Section, a title that it is believed more properly describes its functions . . .

The Inter-Union Council, through M. Naigles, its chairman, has sent to all A. F. G. E. lodges copies of the "protest and appeal" that was made last week to the executive council of the A. F. of L., seeking an inquiry into the ousting of the five Inter-Union Council lodges by the last A. F. G. E. convention . . . Under the salutation, "Fraternal Greetings," the council asks the individual lodges "kindly to bring" this protest and appeal "to the attention of the members of your lodge . . ." They mailed around the documents as "part of our program of keeping A. F. G. E. lodges throughout the country informed of events here in Washington . . ."

Tid-bits from "Stop That Axe," the latest publication from the Committee Against False Economy: "Do You Want To Go Back To 1932?—When thousands were fired, still more furloughed, salaries reduced, leave cut, overtime prevailed, pay increases prohibited, morale destroyed, efficiency impaired . . . The public learned then that true economy could not be achieved at the expense of efficiency in Government service . . . The Committee Against False Economy opposes any blanket reductions in departmental or relief appropriations which would curtail necessary functions of Government."

Boys in Gray Pay Tribute To Their Dead

3 Veterans, All Past 90, Brave Heat for Program at Arlington.

Flowers Strewn on Graves of Confederates Near West Gate.

The soldiers who followed Gen. Robert E. Lee, Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson, J. E. B. Stuart and the other Confederate warriors were memorialized yesterday afternoon in Arlington Amphitheater, once a part of Lee's estate.

More than 2,000 friends of the Confederacy were there, took part in patriotic services, heard the eulogistic remarks of notable speakers, and applauded the recitation of the deeds performed 75 years ago by the heroes of the South.

Only three of those heroes were able to be present yesterday at exercises staged by Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy and several assisting patriotic organizations.

Although the sun beating down on Arlington's tiers of white marble drove the hundreds of spectators to the shelter of surrounding shade, these veterans, all of them past ninetieth birthdays, held their places on the stage for the duration of the program. Ceremonies, lasting for more than an hour, were carried over the National Broadcasting Co. network.

Gen. Waller Present.

Oldest of the trio of veterans present was Gen. E. M. Waller, 94, of 1409 Harvard street northwest. His comrades were Maj. Robert W. Wilson, 90, of 3548 Warder street northwest, who wore his gray uniform, and J. J. George, 91, 1373 Quincy street northwest.

After the program of speaking and music in the amphitheater, these soldiers of the War Between the States followed the United States Marine Band across the hallowed slopes of the National Cemetery to the Confederate Monument near the West Gate. There they stood with bared heads as flowers were strewed over the graves of the Confederate dead. A wreath was placed on the tomb of Gen. Joe Wheeler.

In the amphitheater, Representative Sam Rayburn, Democratic floor leader in the House of Representatives, addressed the assembly, calling their attention to the patriotic services of the men and women of the Confederacy.

"The issues of that hour have long since been settled," said the speaker, "yet it is fitting that on occasions such as this that those Confederates who lived be remembered by their descendants who live today."

Every crisis, said Representative Rayburn, has produced a leader who measured up to the occasion. The war of 1861 to 1865 gave several great leaders to our country, notably Robert E. Lee, the speaker declared.

The audience applauded Rayburn's tribute, not only to Lee and his Confederate associates, but also to Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln's tragic death, he said, was a blow to the South.

Sung Lee Hymn.

"If Lincoln had lived the great Southland would not have been ground under the heel of the carpet-bagger."

Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, although not a scheduled speaker, appeared briefly on the program to describe his bill to authorize a statue of Robert E. Lee to be erected at the West Gate of Arlington.

Miss Julia Evans, president of the Maj. Charles M. Stedman Chapter, Children of the Confederacy, also addressed the audience, declaring that "the Confederacy lives on in the lessons of courage and chivalry taught by the great men who led the South." She paid particular tribute to Gen. Lee, Jackson, Stuart and Jefferson Davis.

Fred P. Myers, past District of Columbia and Maryland Division commander of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, was master of ceremonies. The Rev. Andrew Reid Bird, of the Church of the Pilgrims, gave the invocation, and the Rev. John E. Briggs, pastor of Fifth Baptist Church, pronounced the benediction.

Mrs. Albion W. Tuck, past president, D. C. division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, gave the salute to the Confederate flag, and Marx E. Kahn, recited his own "American Ode." Judge Randolph Preston introduced Representative Rayburn.

The assisting organizations included the Confederate Southern Memorial Association, Children of the Confederacy, United Spanish War Veterans, U. S. A., American Legion, U. S. A., D. C. National Guard and the Boy Scouts of America.

Fruits Gaining In Popularity, Survey Shows

By the United Press.

Americans are eating more fruits and vegetables than they were 15 years ago, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics revealed last night after a careful study of the Nation's diet.

Despite the elasticity of the human stomach, as witness the gastronomical achievements of Thanksgiving and Christmas, the bureau found that the average amount of foodstuffs consumed per person in this country had not changed materially since the World War. This result held true whether the consumption was measured in pounds or calories.

More fresh and canned vegetables are going into American stomachs than 15 years ago, the survey showed. Dried beans, for example, have showed a marked increase. The amount of rice consumed has remained steady throughout the period.

Citrus Fruits Popular.

Citrus fruits, a major product of the sunshine fields of California, Florida and Texas, have jumped up in consumption, the survey showed. This increase was partially offset by a decrease in the use of apples. Other fruits have held about steady.

Consumption of wheat for human purposes and of corn for corn meal, corn flakes, corn starch, corn oil and corn sugar have held steady.

Potatoes are not as popular as they were during the early 1920's. Sugar consumption increased between 1920 to 1930, but during the depression years it showed a decline.

More Eggs, Milk Used.

Both milk and eggs are now being consumed in larger quantities than in 1920, it was found.

In America's meat diet, the preference has shifted slightly from beef and veal, consumption of which has declined, to mutton and lamb; pork consumption has held about steady.

The average individual needed 2.02 acres in 1920-1925 for food and fibers, 2.05 acres in 1925-1930, and 1.95 acres in 1930-1935, the Bureau's survey showed.

Cotton Consumption Record.

Consumption of the chief fiber crop, cotton, held steady during the 1920's, but declined somewhat under the pressure of the reduced industrial activities of the depression years.

In predicting the future consumption, the bureau pointed out that new industrial uses for farm crops might upset the entire balance, but said that it was impossible now to tell whether these will come and that farmers should not gamble in this might-be market.

Taking into consideration the land needed to raise food for work stock, the bureau estimated that during the next few years Americans can use domestically the crops from 365,000,000 acres. That leaves approximately 60,000,000 acres now in use for which markets have to be found abroad or new uses stimulated in this country.

Nursery Training Advocated For District Public Schools

Advisory Council on Nursery Schools Will Meet Today to Perfect Plans for Program.

With an ultimate goal of establishment of nursery school as a part of the Washington public school system, the advisory council on nursery schools will meet this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Florence Watson Oleson, chairman, to discuss plans for effecting its program.

The council includes representatives of leading educational institutions, District philanthropic and civic organizations. It was formed recently by Mrs. Christy Ann Kittle, chairman of the settlement council of the Council of Social Agencies.

At the meeting in which the council's program was introduced, educators specialists in preschool training and laymen from numerous fields combined their interests in preschool education to develop a 7-point program.

A brief drawn by the legislative committee, headed by Mrs. Mordecai Ezekial, former director of WPA nursery schools in the District, has been submitted to the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations. The sub-committee is asked to drop the present clause prohibiting the use of school funds for the instruction of children under 5 years of age.

A brief also has been presented to the Board of Education. This proposes the introduction of nursery schools into the public school system here, in connection with the 1939 budget.

Besides Mrs. Oleson, the officers of the council are Mrs. Flaxie Pinkett, Northwest House; Mrs. Ezekial; Mrs. Adelia Boynton Heiney, National Child Research Center director, and Edith Mary Coulson, Council of Social Agencies.

Membership includes Maud Alton, Americanization School; the Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Carey, Catholic University; Mrs. Cornelia Cochran, League of Women Voters; Bessie Cramer, Peabody School; Irma Craig, Miner Teachers College; Dr. Mitchell Dreese, George Washington University; Mrs. Adelaide H. Furman, in-service training for nursery school teachers, Council of Social Agencies; Anna D. Halberg, Wilson Teachers College; Madeleine Kirkland, Howard University; Edna McNaughton, Maryland University; Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, Health Department, District of Columbia; John C. Payne, John F. Cooke School; Kate G. Trent, Wilson College; Katharine Watkins, Parent-Teacher Association.

Mrs. Oleson represents the American Association of University Women.

Co-operating in an advisory capacity in the council's program are William Bristow, of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Dr. Grace Longdon, WPA, parent education and nursery school specialist.

Girl, 16, Saves Man From Drowning

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., June 6.—Sixteen-year-old Anita Tennant, with a year's training in a junior life-saving school last summer, was credited with saving the life of Fred Hemp, of Martinsburg, W. Va., a 140-pounder, when he sank in the Potomac River neare here yesterday.

She heard his cries and swam to his side, keeping him afloat until two men in a boat brought aid. He was swimming near the ferry crossing here and was caught in swift waters.

The girl was graduated from the high school here last week. Witnesses to the rescue said it demanded unusual strength on the girl's part to keep the man up, although he did not physically resist.

Bumper Peach Crop Is Expected This Year

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., June 6.—With danger of spring frosts now over, prospects are bright for a bumper peach crop in West Virginia, R. S. Marsh, fruit specialist for West Virginia, said today.

Most trees have from three to four times as much fruit as they should have, Marsh declared, and he advised orchardists to thin the fruit down considerably so as to harvest larger and better peaches.

Va. Farm Bureau Ordered to Pay Tax

Harrisonburg, Va., June 6.—The Rockingham County Farm Bureau, the largest farm co-operative of its type in Virginia, which does $1,000,000 annual business and operates an $80,000 plant here, should pay a tax the same as any other merchant, Judge H. W. Bertram ruled here yesterday in Rockingham Circuit Court.

The opinion came when Judge Bertram denied the motion to dismiss the City of Harrisonburg assessment as erroneous. The farm bureau will appeal the decision to the court of appeals.

Judge Bertram held that the farm bureau was not confining itself to the intent of the Virginia co-operative marketing act as it handles a line of merchandise, ranging from cosmetics to bicycles.

Jouett Day Observed.

Charlottesville, Va., June 6.—Jack Jouett Day, proclaimed by Gov. Peery for the State of Virginia, was observed yesterday by local members of the Daughters of the American Revolution at a meeting of the group held at the Farmington Country Club.

Pastor Lauds Determination And Fortitude

"People usually get what they really want out of life," declared the Rev. William R. Moody yesterday in a sermon in St. Mark's Episcopal Church.

"If you wish to know what a man really wants, do not listen to what he says, watch what he does," the rector told the congregation in the church on Capitol Hill. Dr. Moody said that people "often do not get what they say they want, and sometimes do not get what they think they want, but they usually get what they really want. The test of what they really want is the earnestness with which they go after it."

Dr. Moody mentioned Glen Cunningham, the famous runner, who is said to have overcome a serious injury sustained in boyhood which would have made him a cripple for life but for his determination, and President Roosevelt whose will to achieve power has brushed aside a physical handicap unprecedented in the history of the Presidency, as examples. He attributed their success to a refusal to accept defeat in situations which might well have closed their careers.

"Even the most formidable handicaps may be overcome," the rector declared, "by courage, and the will to win. Many people who ask for sympathy on the ground that they 'have never had a chance' are merely excusing their own laziness, or their own lack of courage. The world soon recognizes gallant courage and honors it, and those who have it and use it are not without their reward."

Praising courage and determination in religion, Dr. Moody declared that the forces of reform can have the better world they talk about only if they have the courage and determination to fight for it until they win.

"This Nation can have honest business and good government if the people really want these things," Dr. Moody asserted. Nations usually get the kind of government they deserve. If you, and the thousands like you, want a strong, clean America, you can have it. Men and nations usually get what they really want, and think worth fighting for."

Dr. K. H. Wood Injured, Horse Dies in Jump

Dr. Wood, riding with his father, Dr. Harold Wood, noted Washington surgeon, was crushed beneath the animal. Several ribs were broken and his collar bone was fractured. The horse died almost instantly of a broken neck.

Dr. Wood was pulled from beneath the dead animal and taken to Garfield Hospital. The accident occurred on Ridge road near Ross road.

Dr. Wood, a graduate of Maryland University Dental School, had decided to send his steed over one more hurdle before returning to his home, 218 Jones Bridge road, Chevy Chase, Md.

Silver has won laurels in local and nearby horse shows for his jumping and both members of the Wood family are well known in Washington and Virginia riding and hunt circles. Dr. Karl Wood has offices at 1726 Eye street northwest and Dr. Harold Wood is a staff surgeon at Garfield Hospital.

Historic Home Sold.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., June 6.—Bachelor's Hope, quaint early colonial home, built in 1678 by Gov. Thomas Notley for a hunting lodge, together with 300 acres of land, has been sold to Col. Walter L. Simpson, U. S. Army, by Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Slingluff, of Bushwood.

D. C. Group Named to Aid Old Church

$10,000 Sought in Drive to Restore Historic St. Andrews.

Committee Chosen for Capital by Bishop Freeman.

Leonardtown, Md., June 6.—The Rev. J. M. B. Woodrow, rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal parish, announced today that Bishop James E. Freeman had named a Washington committee to raise funds for the restoration of historic old St. Andrew's Church. The sum of $10,000 is estimated to be needed.

Members of the committee are C. B. Phillips, Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Church, Washington; Dr. Sinclair Bowen, and H. L. Rust.

The church, erected in 1766, is of colonial brick with flagstone aisles. Over its aytar are the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer carved in stone. The pews have doors and high backs. Because of the weakened condition of the building, services in it had to be discontinued.

Among the distinguished men who served in its vestry were George Plater, Governor of colonial Maryland, and Philip Key, high sheriff and legislator from St. Marys. In its graveyard are buried many notable Marylanders.

South Maryland Alarmed by Mold On Tobacco Plants

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., June 6.—Alarm is felt in Southern Maryland over the scarcity of tobacco plants this season. The planting season is at hand and 75 per cent of the farmers find themselves without sufficient plants. Many seed beds are total failures, while others which were promising a few weeks ago are now seriously affected by blue mold, a plant disease that has been prevalent in Southern Maryland for the last five years, but until this year only in a minor degree.

The wet weather has encouraged its growth and it is feared that the crop will be curtailed greatly on account of it.

During the sprouting season, the weather was dry and cool and the seed did not come up as thick as usual, the beds being thin and bare in spots; now the blue mold has seriously complicated matters and the crop will be shortest in a number of years, is the prediction of many growers of tobacco, the staple crop of this whole section of Maryland.

Washington Screen Bookings Represent Consensus On National Preview Committee's Monthly "Bests"

June Appraisals, as Released by the Will Hays Office, Coincide With the Capital's Previous Findings; Subscriptions Open for Summer Theater; Bands Are Headed West for Pictures; Amusement Notes.

THE June issue of that valuable little pamphlet that comes along each month from the Will H. Hays organization, "Selected Motion Pictures," expressing the opinions of preview audiences throughout the breadth of the country, names six films as "best of the month" and labels each one "outstanding."

BELL.

These pictures, in the order of their recitation, are "Make Way For Tomorrow," a Paramount production, with Victor Moore and Beulah Bondi; "Night Must Fall," "Shall We Dance," "Slim," a Warner Brothers release, with Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda and Margaret Lindsay; "They Gave Him a Gun" and "This Is My Affair."

Of these, Washington already has seen, or is seeing four. The two that have not as yet been publicly screened in the Capital are "Make Way For Tomorrow" and "Slim." "Make Way For Tomorrow" will be the next attraction on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater; of "Slim," as a local booking, I have no word, as yet.

It may be interesting to know that the Hays brochure describes "Make Way For Tomorrow" as "a poignant social drama dealing with the tragic and unbridgeable gulf between one generation and the next. The superlative acting of Beaulah Bondi and Victor Moore in the leading roles can hardly be overpraised."

Of "Slim," this is said: "A dramatic story of the heroism and faithful discharge of duty which makes possible a casually accepted utility. Dialogue is especially crisp and in character." To clarify that "casually accepted utility" allusion, it may be said that the hero of the tale is a young man working as a linesman in the construction of a high-power transmission line, powered by Boulder Dam.

"Shall We Dance?" of course, has run its run at RKO-Keith's. "Night Must Fall," in which Robert Montgomery does the best work he ever has brought to the screen, and "This Is My Affair" are currently on view at the Capitol and Palace. Both are well worth seeing. "They Gave Him a Gun" came off the Capitol screen last week.

It is conspicuously evident that national opinion agrees almost to the dot with the managerial minds that book the screen attractions in our downtown, first-run theaters. Washington is fortunate in that regard.

• • • •

Speaking of "Make Way For Tomorrow," there is to be a "double-header" screening for the drama desks, beginning today at 1 p. m. First to be shown will be the screen version of "Parnell," costarring Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, and immediately following the "Make Way For Tomorrow" business, in which Miss Bondi, our old fellow-townswoman; Victor Moore and Fay Bainter are said to do such splendid work. More of this later.

• • • •

Wayne Morris, youthful Warner Brothers "discovery," whose work in "Kid Galahad," at the Earle, has attracted widespread attention, has been signed for an important role in "Submarine 262," now in production.

Director Lloyd Bacon now is in New London, Conn., with a camera crew, making "key shots" for the production at the United States submarine base there. We will get a complete line on this young Morris fellow's ability yet, with a little patience.

• • • •

As long as we are on the topic of the Earle and its current bill, you might care to know that Benny Goodman, whose "swing band" furnishes the stage show this week, is seriously considering the possibility of conducting the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra in one or two concerts in the Robin Hood Dell this summer.. The famous symphonic organization is seeking a young jazz baton swisher for one or more concerts. Goodman's acceptance depends largely upon his ability to find the time. Two weeks after concluding his current Earle engagement, he goes to the West Coast and while there will appear in a picture, "Hollywood Hotel," with Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers. Variety recently announced the possible Philadelphia engagement in these terms, "Hot Clarinet Kid May Lead Symph." Well, anyhow, that says it—after a fashion.

• • • •

It will be of interest to his many friends in the National Capital and surrounding territory to know that over the torrid week-end Charles Kranz, local franchise holder and distributor of Imperial Pictures, received the invigorating telegraphic news that he had been appointed to the board of that producing company. The news was dispatched to him by William B. Pizor, president of Imperial.

Simultaneously with this word comes another that Distributor Kranz has just signed a five-year lease for the premises now occupied by that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty's, Columbia Pictures at 824 New Jersey avenue. Columbia is going into new quarters on September 1 and Imperial will follow into the film exchanbe on approximately that date.

• • • •

That veteran showman, Master Stephen E. Cochran, evidently means business. Reservation blanks went out over the week-end for his Summer Festival of the Drama, to be presented at the University of Maryland, beginning Monday, July 12. There are two methods of securing the same seat locations for the plays to be presented. One is by paid subscription for all of the ten plays, at a reduced rate; the other to make seat reservations and pick them up weekly at the regular schedule of prices. The policy will be identical with that pursued during Mr. Cochran's 11 years of operation of the National Theater Players—a stock company of the first rank, with visiting stars imported for their best roles.

• • • •

Hollywood seems to be interested in the versatile goings-on of Mr. Meroff's band and also in the screen potentialities of his wife, Florence Gast, appearing with him this week at the Capitol. Miss Gast formerly was in the Ziegfeld "Follies" and is reputedly a product of W. C. Fields' expert coaching. Mr. Fields did a pretty good job.

• • • •

Rising Temperature Note.

Yes, it was! And if anybody else asks me, "Is it hot enough for you?" there will be need for the morguemaster's wagon!

Cited Among 'Best of Month'

ROBERT TAYLOR AND BARBARA STANWYCK, who continue a second week on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater in "This Is My Affair," a screen play that dates back to the days of McKinley in the White House. Many important figures in history are characters in the play.

FOREIGN DISPATCH: All last year, when the Duke of Windsor was wooing the then Mrs. Simpson in London, the one person in Mayfair who knew about the romance before any one else was a Mrs. Constance Spry—the Duke's favorite florist. As the affair progressed, and the orders for roses and orchids increased, Mrs. Spry found herself becoming more and more intrigued with the romance . . . With the aid of a liberal judge, he gave vent to that contempt—by changing his name legally to John Pierpont Morgan!

Mad Head-Hunter Kills 2 Children; Death Toll Now 13

Manila, June 6 (AP).—The maniacal head-hunter Kalinga Boli hacked two children to death today, bringing to 13 the number he has killed and to 20 the total death count attributable to his savagery.

Keeping far ahead of pursuing constabularymen, the crazed descendant of fierce head-hunting tribesmen, crept upon the children in the village of Futtul. He wielded a head-ax, the same instrument he has used throughout his murderous campaign.

Terror reigned in the villages of Cagayan Province, Northern Luzon Island, because Boli vowed he would kill 24 persons before surrendering.

Boli turned atavistic when he became convinced his wife had been unfaithful. He killed his wife and five others on the spot. Gathering his supporters, the mad tribesman then began a modern head-hunting expedition.

A Press Agent Cites Further Studio Clashes

By John Peers Miles.

Hollywood, Calif., June 6 (U.P.).—Marlene Dietrich, who engineered the greatest and most widespread publicity in the history of films when she devised the stunt of wearing pants, found out, almost too late, that she couldn't stop.

Her tailored trousers and suits, both for herself and daughter, had piled up tons of mailed recriminations in her studio dressing room. She had achieved, in the space of a few months, tremendous press dominance over her greatest rival for glamour—Greta Garbo, who earned the distinction of being hot news copy by shuddering at realities and the public eye.

When Miss Dietrich saw the handwriting on the wall, she decided to go to Europe, leave unpleasantness behind for a while, and return a new and emancipated Marlene.

But she made the mistake of taking her pants along. The Europeans, charitable in most things having to do with actresses, resented her trousers. In France the people booed her. She returned to Hollywood, ceased being a press agent and devoted all of her time from then on to being an actress in skirts.

Intense Rivalry.

For many years there has been an intense rivalry between this actress and Miss Garbo. It was not until some months ago, when Miss Dietrich was alleged to have snubbed Garbo at the Trocadero, that Hollywood realized that these two people had never met.

In no other place in the world would it have been possible for two superior beings, living seven years in the same small town, to avoid one another. But this is Hollywood.

Miss Dietrich hadn't snubbed Garbo when the two, by accident, were sitting close together at the well-known restaurant for stuffed shirts. "We hadn't been introduced," said Miss Dietrich. And the fact that they hadn't, gave a press agent the inspiration for a "snubbing" rumor that burned up the wires.

Nearly every actress, at one time or another (with the possible exception of Katharine Hepburn, who considered herself superior) have focused jealous eyes upon Garbo. There is no doubt that every girl who comes to Hollywood would rather be one Garbo than ten Dietrichs, Claudette Colberts and Simone Simons.

This is because Garbo is, regardless of the merits, the most important female in Hollywood. Others have eclipsed her for a month or two at a time, but when Garbo opens her mouth and says, "Ay tank ay go 'ome now," the other girls must sit still until the flurry subsides.

Arrived Unnoticed.

Garbo came to Hollywood with as little notice as the afternoon sun. No one had ever heard of her before. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer publicity department only knew that she was Swedish and that she had earned her contract through the insistence of Maurice Stiller, the director.

That her studio could see nothing great in her was evidenced from the beginning. Like all other junior stock players, she was put through the publicity mill, with no holds barred. She was posed in tights, during the leg-art era, and once she was poured into a bathing suit and rushed to the University of Southern California to pose with the boys who later shellacked Notre Dame.

That picture, which now would prove sensational, was almost a total flop in those days for the reason that Greta Garbo was unknown. Her metamorphosis from leg pictures to awed reverence is about the strangest fairy tale Hollywood has yet known.

Trans-Lux

Between the sweepstakes winners telling the world they knew they would win and the water sports shots that provoke the envy of poor city dwellers, the Trans-Lux screen this week is a recreation mirror.

Al Smith lands in Italy and Amelia Earhart starts a globe-girdling flight, while Italy's King pays a social call upon Admiral Horthy, of Hungary, with the troops in attendance.

Fame comes to Libby Holman Reynolds' son—he steps for the first time in front of the camera, or rather rides, almost colliding with Dizzy Dean announcing that he isn't baseball's bad boy.

As usual the Trans-Lux program provides a unique travel short—this time the peasantry of France offer the simple life. These scenes are quite remarkable for landscape and architectural beauty.

The sports section of the bill covers glider champions, surf-board riding in the Pacific, circus training in Wisconsin, auto speeding at Indianapolis, yacht try-outs and a team of the most astounding Danish gymnasts in captivity or out. A rambling camera catches sidelights on amateur District sports that prove summer is here.

Fashions, relatives hunting their dead in a Mexican mining landslide, United States coast defense target practice, planes taking food to workers in the steel strike and Mickey Mouse's circus, in color, round out a diversified program.

Chicago Board of Trade Votes $600 Assessment

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Board of trade members voted overwhelmingly today to assess themselves $150 each for the next four years to carry out a refinancing program for the $10,218,000 first mortgage on the exchange's towering building at the foot of La Salle street.

Kenneth S. Templeton, president, said the program will save $1,700,000 over the period to 1948 when the mortgage is due.

Cadillac-La Salle Record.

Detroit, June 6 (AP).—Cadillac-La Salle retail sales for the first 20 days of May totaled 3,108, the best in the company's history, compared with 3,055 for the same period in April, according to D. E. Ahrens, sales manager.

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.

MUTTERINGS: Wonder if Clark Gable can wiggle his ears? Frantic urge: To yank off those cerise scarfs movie heroes wear knotted at the necks of their sports coats, and see if they have on shirts. If Hollywood's present crop of stars could catch a televison shot of themselves as old-timers, they might be kinder to current has-beens. Imaginable hilarious evening: Introducing Jane Withers to Mrs. Shirley Temple with: "Here is that clever child I was telling you about."

JANE WITHERS

SUGGESTION to theater owners: Make every nuisance who taps his toe on the back of the seat in front of him, get on the stage and dance. Nervous itch: To present Andy Devine with a trundle-rest for his awning stomach. Stars who have choice of story, director and cast should be made to return their salaries when they engineer flops. Growl: Gorgeous gals who wear $10,000 ermine coats over $5 slacks. Secret ambition: To start an argument between English-distorters Herman Bing and Henry Armetta.

HIT-AND-RUN NOTION: To sneak into Constance Bennett's dining room before a formal party and scribble HAMBURGERS on her fancy, sterling-framed menu cards. Job I'd like to hold: Tender of the Venetian blinds on Joan Crawford's sun-bathing patio. Silly notion: To hire that Jean Harlow wax dummy and ride the boulevard with "her" beside me. I'm getting wary of Hollywood brides and grooms who say at the ceremony: "This one will endure," especially when both have been wed several times previously.

OUT AT LAKESIDE, they were building a new caddie house and a steam shovel was in the process of scooping out a great hole for the cellar. When Alan Hale walked up from the parking lot to the excavation, he found the usual crowd of interested onlookers standing around watching the steam shovel do its stuff. In the group were Bing Crosby, Dick Arlen, Andy Devine and Babe Hardy, all as goggle-eyed as a New Yorker watching a subway construction.

JUST RAN ONTO an untold story from the past. It concerns the early days of Robert Montgomery's movie career and proves that it usually pays to be nice to the people working around you—even though they are not important.

When Bob was getting a toe hold in Hollywood, he and another actor were up for the same role, and each was screen-tested. A few days elapsed and the studio boss called in Bob and told him that the "big opportunity" lay between him and his rival. Then he suggested to Bob that he cut his salary to insure his chances. Bob refused—but he got the part anyway.

A friend, amazed at his courage, asked why he held out for the extra money. Bob grinned and explained: "The assistant director had already taken me aside and warned me that my competitor was terrible."

WALKED ONTO a set yesterday looking for Joan Bennett and found her propped up in bed. Seems that all her scenes for the past few days have been made that way. I was about to say "Hello," when she stopped me.

"Maybe I'd better warn you," she smiled, "that the next dimwit who cracks, 'Are you getting paid for doing this?' or: 'Nice work if you can get it,' is going to have his wits even further dimmed with THIS!"

And "this" was a prop vase she had hidden under the covers.

New Star Cluster Discovered With Telescope-Camera

By the Associated Press.

A California scientist reported yesterday that a new cluster of giant nebulae, or masses of stars, has been discovered by use of new wide-angle telescope and camera.

Writing in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, Dr. F. Zwicky, of the California Institute of Technology, said the new cluster, which contains between 300 and 400 of the nebulae, lies in the constellation of Pisces at a distance of approximately 25,800,000 light-years from the earth. A light-year is the distance light travels in a year at a speed of 186,000 miles per second.

The new group is elliptical in shape, he added, the long diameter, which points east and west, being about 4,000,000 light-years in length, and the distance across it about 1,000,000 light-years. It was described as far too faint for ordinary observation.

The reason for studying and recording these star masses, the California scientist said, is that "clusters of nebulae represent the largest aggregations of matter known."

All Safe as Vessel Founders in Atlantic

Montevideo, June 6 (U.P.).—The Buenos Aires to Colonia steamship Vienna foundered at 4 p. m. (Eastern daylight time) today after running aground off Farallon Island, 20 miles from Colonia, it was reported here. All aboard were reported safe.

Earlier in the day the Vienna radioed this port that she was "taking water." No other details were available immediately. The Vienna's home port was Buenos Aires.

Belasco.

Returning for its third visit to the Belasco Theater, "Ecstasy" took possession of the Lafayette Square screen at a late Friday night performance and resumed its regular schedule on Saturday.

There is not much that remains to be said of this highly controversial bit of Czechoslovakian motion picture production. It has been a storm-center ever since the first attempts to import it into this country were made, although one is moved to wonder why. Its story is frankly and unashamedly melodramatic and ends in tragedy. Before that dire eventuation is reached, there are scenes that arouse the ire of many and leave just as many cold.

A young woman is married to an elderly and prosaic man. She meets a young engineer and falls in love. It is, of course, the familiar triangle plot. As was remarked in Sunday's column, there is in this deftly wrought film whatever you wish to read into it. As for the scenes in which nudity of the feminine body is briefly and remotely pictured, they are more ludicrous than shocking.

Little

"Calvacade," the prize-winning production of its year, was brought back to the screen of the Little Theater yesterday to emphasize the travail through which Britain has passed in building an empire. Although long familiar, this seems a timely booking in view of the recent coronation and the wedding of the Duke of Windsor.

"Calvacade," written as a stage spectacle by Noel Coward, and a popular hit in London for a year, is a majestic piece of work. It has been translated to the screen with practically no alterations of the original script. During its action, the major events and some of the minor incidents of England's progress are pursued down the years from the time of the Boer War in South Africa to the present—the Boers, the death of Queen Victoria, the sinking of the Titanic and much more.

The principal roles are played by Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard, with an unusually long cast of other celebrities in support.

The bill is completed by the usual shorter subjects and a new issue of the news events.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Vanishing Honors.

Some of the soundest appearing penalty doubles turn out to be boomerangs. Even trump honors seem to vanish, in a manner of speaking, when exposed to the legerdemain of an expert declarer. West, in the hand shown below, felt that nothing short of sudden death could prevent his defeating the contract.

South, dealer.
North-South, vulnerable.

	♠ A Q 7 ♡ 9 6 5 2 ◇ A 9 4 ♣ J 10 7
♠ K J 10 ♡ K Q J 8 ◇ Q J 10 ♣ K 6 2	North West East South	♠ 6 4 3 2 ♡ — ◇ 8 7 6 5 3 2 ♣ 9 5 4
	♠ 9 8 5 ♡ A 10 7 4 3 ◇ K ♣ A Q 8 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

West, not vulnerable, against vulnerable opponents decided to "trap" the moment he heard South's opening bid. North's jump heart raise was shaded. His lack of a singleton or doubleton made the requirements for a double raise 3 honor-tricks. Also, the prescribed trump holding for this type raise is four to a Jack or better. Declarer managed, however, to make his available material suffice.

The diamond Queen was the opening lead, won by the King. The spade finesse was tried immediately, and this was followed by the Jack of clubs. Declarer ducked and West won with the King, returning the King of spades. Dummy's Ace won, and declarer's remaining spade was discarded on the diamond Ace. Dummy's remaining diamond was ruffed, and the ten of clubs was then utilized as an entry for the ruffing of dummy's last spade.

Declarer was now down to three trumps as against West's four, but this caused declarer no worry. The Ace of clubs was cashed, and the fourth round put West into a hopeless position. He was now down to trumps; to ruff with the heart eight would merely invite an overruff with dummy's nine. So he ruffed high, but this did him no good either! He had to return an honor which was smothered with the Ace, and his remaining honor was his third and last winning trick.

War Admiral, Injured in Belmont Stakes, May Not Race Again This Season

SIMMONS' SLUGGING HELPS NATS TAME INDIANS, 8 TO 7

Wound Size of Half Dollar in Champion's Leg; May Retire.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—As the result of an injury suffered in his record-smashing triumph in the Belmont Stakes, Samuel Biddle's War Admiral will not race again this season.

The little son of Man o' War, which tied Handy Mandy's American record and bettered his famous sire's track mark as he stepped the mile and a half in 2:22 3-5, grabbed his right foreleg soon after the start. He set all the pace, beating Maxwell Howard's Sceneshifter by four lengths, and finished with blood spurting from a wound the size of a half-dollar.

"I don't see how he can be brought back to the races before fall and that is even very doubtful," said his 65-year-old trainer, George Conway, as he sat outside his star's stall today and talked of the sudden misfortune to a horse that had caught the public's fancy as few thoroughbred's have done in recent years.

Only 24 hours before, the Admiral had become the fourth horse in turf history to win the "triple crown," consisting of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. The other three were Sir Barton (1919), Gallant Fox (1930) and Omaha (1935).

Greater Than Crusader.

"Yes, he's a great horse," said Conway. "Probably not as great as his daddy, but a better horse than Crusader, because he's got early speed." Until the Admiral arrived on the scene, Conway considered Crusader the best horse ever sired by "Old Red," which hung up the Belmont Park track record of 2:28 4-5 when he was sweeping all before him in 1920.

The veteran trainer, as well as other conditioners, marveled at the heart of the Admiral—injured as he broke from the barrier, early went down, and then went on to throw dust in the eyes of six highly regarded rivals. Stretched out far behind him were Sceneshifter, Harry F. Guggenheim's Vamoose, a despised outsider, E. R. Bradley's Brooklyn, John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot, J. H. Lochheim's Pompoon, the colt that finished second in the Derby and Preakness, and the Wheatley Stable's Melodist.

"We had to scrape the blood off his body after he returned to his stall," said Conway. "He cooled out very lame, but today is able to bear little weight on the injured leg. Time will prove the best healer, though we have to be on the lookout for infection, made doubly dangerous by the fact he raced the entire distance with the open wound.

"I'll probably keep him at Belmont Park for a few weeks then ship him to Saratoga. He's eligible for three stakes at the Spa, including the Travers and Saratoga Cup, but it'll take a miracle for him to be in condition. It's a better guess to say he'll race in September at Belmont Park, if at all."

There was little to the race, run before a near record crowd of 35,000. Charley Kurtsinger broke the Admiral from the outside, took an early lead, tossed back the challenge of Flying Scot and then Sceneshifter to win in a gallop.

The fractional times tell a graphic story of how the Riddle ace also clipped three-fifths of a second off Race Chance's stake record of 2:29 1-5.

They were: 0:24, 0:48, 2:12 1-5, 1:37, 2:02 1-5 and 2:28 3-5. The time of 2:02 1-5 for the mile and a quarter was a full second faster than he was clocked in winning the Kentucky Derby over that distance. War Admiral carried 126 pounds, as compared to Handy Mandy's 109 in setting the American record at Latonia in 1927.

The victory, worth $38,020, ran the Admiral's earnings for five unbeaten races this year to $144,620 and for two years of campaigning to $159,420. Backers of the colt received 9 to 10.

Giants Win From Bucs; Lead Loop

Cubs Split Bill With Bees; Reds Beat Dodgers; Cards Get Two.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 6.—The Giants took over first place in the National League today by pounding three Pittsburgh pitchers for 13 hits and a 9-to-5 victory over the Pirates.

It was the first time the Bucs had been ousted from the loop lead since May 1.

Gus Mancuso's homer with two mates aboard in the fourth inning sent the Giants off to a lead they never relinquished, although they had to call on Carl Hubbell to relieve Hal Schumacher in the ninth inning and retire the last two Pittsburgh batters.

The defeat was the fourth straight for the Bucs and the second in a row they dropped to the Giants. By winning, the Giants went one full game out in front.

The slipping Pirates barely managed to hang onto second place, since the third-place Chicago Cubs were only a few percentage points behind after splitting with the Boston Bees today.

The Giants opened the scoring, getting a run in the first on Dick Bartell's double and Jim Ripple's single. Mancuso's circuit clout gave them three more in the fourth and drove Cy Blanton, the Pittsburgh starter, to the showers.

Continuing their clouting off Big Jim Weaver, they added another in the fifth on Lee Handley's error, a single by Ripple and a two-bagger by Mel Ott. Another three-run rally featured the sixth, with successive singles by Burgess Whitehead, Schumacher and Lou Chiozza and a two-bagger by Kiddo Davis driving Weaver from the mound. The New Yorkers then added their final run off Waite Hoyt in the eighth on a double by Chiozza and a single by Ripple.

Cards Win One And Get Forfeit

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 6 (AP).—Umpire Ziggy Sears forfeited the second game of a double-header between the Cardinals and Phillies to St. Louis, 9 to 0, today for alleged dilatory tactics by the Philadelphia Club in what appeared to be an attempt to prolong the game until the Sunday curfew would halt the contest before it became legal. St. Louis was ahead at the time, 8 to 2.

The Phillies dropped the first game by a score of 7 to 2, with Lon Warneke pitching for St. Louis and a trio of hurlers performing on the mound for the locals.

Philadelphia started what appeared to be stalling in the third inning of the second contest after the Cards had piled up a big advantage.

The overt act that brought the struggle to a conclusion was Johnson's wild pitch to Martin that allowed Durocher to score from third. Umpire Klem, veteran of the National League, who was standing behind Johnson, rushed to the plate and after a few moments conference with Sears, the latter declared the game forfeited.

STRICTLY ABOUT THE TRAINING CAMPS OF JOE LOUIS AND JIMMY BRADDOCK . . . who will meet in Chicago June 22 . . . rumor hath it that JACK BLACKBURN, Louis' trainer, who generally is credited with developing Joe into the knockout artist he is, has been reported missing at the Brown Bomber's camp in Kenosha, Wis. . . . these rumors have not been substantiated . . . but, strangely enough, not one word has been sent out from the camp regarding Blackburn . . . who usually figures prominently in the press releases put out by the official ballyhooers . . . it will be recalled that not so long ago, Louis almost split with his co-managers, JULIAN BLACK and JOHN ROXBOROUGH, over the question of Blackburn . . . Black and Roxborough wanted to get rid of Blackburn . . . and Joe told them if Blackburn went, he went too . . . the matter was dropped at that time . . . but the subject may have been reopened now that Louis is on the verge of getting a crack at the coveted heavyweight crown . . . Braddock says the hardest fight he ever had was against FRANK ZAVITA, a stovemaker from Somerville, N. J. . . . they tangled in a Newark amateur tournament . . . and Zavita doubled James with a left to the stomach with the first punch . . . Jim dropped his opponent 11 times, but the rugged 215-pounder kept getting up and poking back . . . he finally knocked out Zavita, however . . . up in Louis' camp, MUSKY JACKSON, major domo of the quarters, is serving in his usual capacity of SAM GOLDWYN, of the fight game . . . when it was learned that Louis would move his public workouts indoors in the Moose Club in the event of bad weather, a scribe asked Mushky, "What's a moose?" . . . the Commander of the Shock Brigade which provides Louis with workouts was equal to the occasion . . . "It's a cow with horns," he replied promptly.

40,000 See Tigers Beat Yanks, 5-4

Red Sox, Browns Split; Chisox Win Two, Near 1st Place.

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 6.—Tommy Bridges, entering the contest as Detroit's second relief pitcher, won his own ball game today by smashing a single over second base in the ninth inning to knock in the run that defeated the New York Yankees, 5 to 4.

Bridges, who let the Yankees have only one hit in an inning and one-third, was credited with his fifth victory this season. The game, which evened the series, was played before 40,000 fans, second largest crowd here this year.

Charles (Red) Ruffing, after striking out six men and giving Detroit nine hits, walked Marvin Owen in the ninth. Owen went to second on George Tebbett's sacrifice. Then Ruffing threw a wild pitch, letting Owen get to third in position to score on Bridges' hit.

New York tied the score in the eighth inning when Joe DiMaggio knocked a home run over the centerfield scoreboard, scoring also Frank Crosetti.

The Tigers had taken the lead in the seventh after Pete Fox clouted one over the leftfield wall with Goose Goslin and Tebbetts on bases. It was Fox's second homer this season.

Roxie Lawson, failing to win a ninth victory, was taken out in the seventh after allowing two runs and five hits. Jack Russell replaced him but lasted less than an inning.

White Sox Take Two From Macks

Chicago, June 6.—The spurting Chicago White Sox extended their winning streak to eight straight games and advanced to within two games of the first place Yankees today by twice defeating the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 1, and 6 to 5. A 32,000 crowd saw the doubleheader.

Backing up Ted Lyons' four-hit pitching with a 13-hit attack directed chiefly at Bud Thomas, the Chicagoans took a commanding lead in the fourth inning of the opener, but the nightcap wasn't so much of a breeze. Trailing by four runs with two out in the eighth, the Athletics rallied for a pair and then routed Monty Stration in the ninth. Reliever Clint Brown causing Earl

High School Golfer Led From Start

By the Associated Press.

San Antonio, Tex., June 6.—Demure Betty Jameson smashed her way into the top flight of women's golf today, crushing Patty Berg, 4 and 3, in a battle of 18-year-old high school seniors to win the trans-Mississippi championship.

The San Antonio lass conquered three Curtis Cup stars, including Defending Champion Marion Miley, in hre march to the title.

Fifteen hundred home-town fans watched Betty defeat the sensational Minneapolis redhead, a Curtis Cup team member, with a great finish after gaining a four-hole lead through 27 holes.

Two other Curtis Cup stars—Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, four-time trans-Mississippi champion, and Miss Miley, of Lexington, Ky., twice titleholder—fell before Miss Jameson yesterday.

Six weeks ago, Betty crushed Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, of Fort Worth, 10 and 8, to win the Texas championship a second time. Two years ago, she captured the Southern amateur.

Took Lead Early.

It was the Texan's match from the ninth hole today—and she protected it with coolness and deliberation despite a strong wind that wafted shots into the rough and bunkers.

Freckled Patty, slightly ill after a gruelling day in 100-degree heat yesterday, received treatment from a physician between rounds, but scrapped down to the last shot. On the final green she buried a 6-foot putt for a birdie, but Betty matched her birdie, to win the title.

Miss Berg's Putting Off.

Sadly off her usually good putting game, Miss Berg slipped too often on the greens. Her long putts either rimmed the hole or slid by the sides. On the other side, Miss Jameson's putts found the hole in the clinches.

A fine 39, one under women's par, on the last nine of the morning round, gave Miss Jameson a two-hole lead as they went to lunch.

Ralph Young's Myray Victor In 20-Foot Handicap Races

By Daniel F. Craig.

Ole Sol shone on Potomac sailors all morning and most of the afternoon yesterday, but he got mixed up in some thunder clouds just as Ralph Youngs was sailing his 20-foot sloop, Myray, over the finish line in the afternoon race of the sailing association's "semidouble-header," and missed the finish that gave Ralph his second victory of the day and won for him the spring series in the 20-foot open handicap class.

Myray negotiated the 5-mile Haines Point course in the fast time of 49:24, and sailed through the advance guard of a thunderstorm in the afternoon to beat her nearest rival, H. C. Bush's Cricket II, by almost 3 minutes. Only three divisions got the gun in the morning race, the A and B handicap boats and the 20-footers, but in the afternoon Verner Smythe, 1936 National High Point Comet champion, with Miss Priscilla Rob as crew, proceeded to soundly trounce a fleet of 15 comets, besting the chief pursuer, Clyde Cruit who piloted So Big, by more than 2 minutes, and humbling the larger boats of the 20-foot class by turning in the best elapsed time of the afternoon.

In the morning race, Ted De Boer's Sandpiper took first honors in class A, with Nelson Elgin's Buccaneer and the Sea Scouts Bobcat, second and third, respectively. Paul Tremearne's moth, Ihochu II, was first in class B, by virtue of a decision handed down by the slide rule, although Bill Preston's dinghy, Flighty, hung up the best elapsed time. A. L. Greever's Alvern placed second, with Sink Quick, George Danker's Commodore's Cup winner third. Myray went on the race committee's books with the unusually good time of 49:24, beating Lady Avon and Cricket II by a 12-minute margin.

Shortly after the start of the afternoon race, William White's Frolic was way out ahead, but at the bell buoy her position was hotly contested and several boats jumped her lead before rounding the Georgetown channel marker.

Malcolm Lambourne brought Freya over the line in third place to trim Nandua and Escapade, the usual contenders for this position, by a four-boat margin. Eight comets bunched over the line in less than 1 minute in a hotly contested finish. Mal. H. Jacobs led the formation in Lith, followed by Charlie Deggen in Tangier and Zimmer in Serena. Nandua surged forward a few feet from the imaginary tape to beat Ernie Covert's Escapade by a scant second margin, with William Diehl's Cygnet nosed out a few seconds later by Dr. Albert Pagan's Gwen.

Bill Preston's tiny 11-foot dinghy Flighty won the afternoon race in class B, sailing in second place on elapsed time. George Danker's Sink Quick finished first, but fell to second place under corrected time. Flighty arrived just in time for today's races on a trailer after a very successful trip to Baltimore, where she nabbed first place in the 14-foot and under class of the Maryland Yacht Club's regatta Saturday.

In class A, Frank Levy's keel sloop Kittiwynk rounded the course for best time in both elapsed and corrected time, Sandpiper finished second, with the Sea Scout's Bobcat receiving third place.

Boats of the 20 open class concluded the spring series by completing the two races, and the final standings for their schedule puts Ralph Young's Myray first, Judge Edrington's Lady Avon second, and H. C. Bush's Cricket II third.

National Open Event a Real Bargain

Cleveland, Ohio, June 6.—The all-time best in sports bargains is the major leagues' annual all-star game in which, for a buck ten, the fan can witness the absolute tops in baseball skill. And if you are not exactly choosy you can see the same game from the pavilion seats for 80 cents.

POVICH

But running that affair a close second in value received for the money output will be this year's National Open Golf Tournament at Detroit. Once a snooty sort of game, golf is now offering a show of its best talent at a cost to the fan of only $5.50 for three days of play.

And if you pro-rate that $5.50 fee over the two days of practice rounds in which the ticket holder is also entitled to watch the upper crust of golf perform at Oakland Hills this year, then you arrive at a per diem cost of only $1.10—which, as the saying goes, is not bad.

* * * *

At least it's a welcome relief from the $3.30 tax at the Davis Cup matches, the $4.40 charge at the Army-Navy football games and the other high-priced attractions such as the ivy-covered gridiron battles of the East and Midwest.

* * * *

Like baseball's all-star show, the National Open at Oakland Hills will be presenting the absolute tops in skill. The gents whose habit it has been to traipse around the country staging exhibition matches at $1 and $2 a throw for tickets will all be herded into the one tournament at the bargain rates.

* * * *

Golf's big show has had a long and glamorous history from the time that Willie Dunn beat Willie Campbell, two up, in 1894 at Mount Hope, N. Y., in the only match play United States Open ever conducted. Since then it has been a straightaway medal scoring proposition.

* * * *

It wasn't really an American game back in those early days. The guys who played it best were the Scotch and British-born fellows who came out of the heather of the old country to lord it over the Yankees who had only lately taken to the game.

* * * *

Names like Dunn, Foulis, Herd, Vardon, Auchterlonie, FitzJohn and McLeod were listed among the low scorers. In fact it wasn't until 1911, 17 years after the thing started, when an American-born golfer finally won the American Open. That was when John J. McDermott, of Atlantic City, beat the Irishman, Mike Brady, in a play-off at Chicago.

* * * *

Golf didn't really take on as a sport for the proletariat until 1913 when Francis Ouimet, who had been a caddy at the Brookline, Mass., Club, where the open was played that year, beat Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, the Englishman, in a play-off. Then American folks who were told the story of the ambitious caddy began to view the game kindly. It apparently was not a game only for the rich.

* * * *

But lest you think that golf did not exist in America before the nineties, let me quote to you from the Royal Gazette, a New York publication, dated Wednesday, April 21, 1779: "To the golf players—the season for this pleasant and healthy exercise is now advancing. Gentlemen may procure clubs and caledonian balls by enquiring at the publishers."

* * * *

Unlike baseball, which retained the same distance between bases from the day that the late Mr. Doubleday laid out the first diamond near Schenectady in 1859, golf has undergone amazing transformations.

* * * *

It first adopted an out-of-bounds rule in the nineties, because a gentleman named Charles Blair McDonald, of Chicago, had an incurable slice and had a Chicago course built to order to conform with that slice. The hypodermically treated golf ball, which is now the choice of the best golfers, is a far cry from the original golf ball used by the Scots—a little sphere composed chiefly of tightly wrapped feathers—the feather ball. Golfers later graduated to the putty ball, a supply of which were carried around in pails of ice to keep them crisp. There was, of course, the hard wooden ball, which was in vogue for a time, only to be supplanted by the hard rubber ball. And then came the gutta percha in an era when golf took, perhaps, its greatest strides as a popular sport.

* * * *

But these days they actually treat golf balls with needles. After the ball is made up, a needle is applied under terrific pressure, and mercury is squirted into the core to fill the vacuum that ball manufacturers otherwise have been unable to eliminate.

Golf has come a long way.

Final Putt Is Missed By Armour

Guldahl - Snead Finish Third, Victory Is Worth $1,000.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, June 6.—Silver-haired Tommy Armour, veteran of the golfing wars, missed by an inch today a putt worth $3,000 as "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper and Horton Smith, the erstwhile "Joplin Ghost," grabbed the first prize of $1,000 in the third annual Inverness best-ball match play tourney.

The heart-breaking 20-foot putt came on the final hole of the 126-hole tourney, providing the greatest finish it has ever seen. Armour stuck his second shot 20 feet from the stick and he needed the birdie 3 to win and go into a tie with the leaders. He studied the line for at least five minutes, then tapped the ball and watched it stop to one side of the cup.

On the putt hung the $1,000 rst prize of the tourney, as well as $2,000 of a 20-to-1 wager which Armour had made on himself and Thomson to take the championship.

Smith-Cooper, plus 7, $1,175; Armour-Thomson, plus 6, $800; Ralph Guldahl-Sam Snead, plus 3, $750; Paul Runyan-Ky Laffoon, plus 1, $600; Henry Picard-Johnny Revolta, zero, $500; Shute-Little, minus 4, 400; Ray Mangrum-Jimmy Hines, minus 6, $300; Olin Dutra-Gere Sarazen, minus 7, $300.

The 16 professionals, all entrants in next week's National Open at Oakland Hills Club, Birmingham, Mich., scered 298 birdies and 6 eagles during the seven matches, 75 of the sub-par holes being recorded today as they blazed down the stretch.

The new champions, who succeed Ky Laffoon and the absent Wealter Hagen, lost two of their seven matches, being defeated, 2 up, by Mangrum and Hines, and 4 up, by Armour and Thomson.

Morning round: Runyan-Laffoon (68) and Guldahl-Snead (69) all square, Picard-Revolta (68) defeated Shute-Little (69) 1 up, Mangrum-Hines (69) defeated Armour Thomson (70) 1 up, Smith-Cooper (66) defeated Dutra-Sarazen (68) 2 up.

After round: Dutra-Sarazen (63) defeated Guldahl-Snead (65) 2 up; Armour-Thomson (65) defeated Shute-Little (67) 2 up; Smith-Cooper (67) defeated Runyan-Laffoon (69) 2 up; Picard-Revolta (67) defeated Mangrum-Hines (68) 1 up.

Smith and Cooper were 9 under par for the day's two matches, but their real margin of victory was provided by Paul Runyan, who missed two 2-foot putts, one on 9 and one on 18, which would have cut 2 points off the leaders' plus rating and moved Armour-Thomson into the king row.

Dutra and Sarazen took down an extra $100 today with a best ball of 131 for the 36 holes, and the lowest of the day. Smith-Cooper got $75 for their second-best 133, and Guldahl-Snead received $50 for their third place 134. Smith Cooper received another $100 for their 61, 10 under par, the best 1-hole round of the tourney.

A gallery of more than 5,000 followed the matches today, despite threatening weather during the morning.

Giants Beaten By Eagles, 5-2

The Washington Elite Giants suffered defeat yesterday at Griffith Stadium at the hands of the Newark Eagles, 5-2. The Eagles overcame a two-run lead in the sixth, when Byrd passed "Mule" Suttles, filling the bases, and Dandridge drove a liner over second, tying the score as Crutchfield and Wells raced across the plate.

Crutchfield singled over second in the seventh to score Day and break the tie. The Elites' rally in their half of this inning, when B. Wright tripled to the rightfield wall, and Wells walked, with two down, fell short as Direux struck out.

Reds Beat Dodgers By 9 to 2 Count

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 6.—Rookie Johnny Vandermeer handcuffed the Dodgers with seven hits today as his Cincinnati Reds mates went on a slugging rampage to whip the Brooklyns, 9 to 2 and even the current series.

All but two of the Reds hit safely, with Alex Kampouris contributing his ninth homer of the season, with the bases loaded, to put the game on ice as early as the third inning. Ival Goodman and Buck Jordan each banged out four hits.

The victory was Vandermeer's second of the seaon. He fanned seven batters and was rarely in trouble, finding only Heinie Manush, who collected two hits, difficult.

Steel Output Is Steady at 75% Capacity

Pig Iron Production for May Is 42% Higher Than for April.

Cleveland, June 6.—Relatively little effect has been felt in the steel market as a result of strikes against producers in the Middle West. Consumers apparently are well supplied and few have sought further tonnage from mills not affected by labor difficulties, says Steel.

The national steelworks average operating rate last week held at 75 per cent of capacity. Pittsburgh increased 1 point to 95 per cent, Detroit 5 points to 100 and Cincinnati 6 points to 96 per cent. Wheeling at 96 and Birmingham at 83 showed no change. Chicago dropped 12 points to 63 per cent. New England 10 points to 45, Cleveland 19 points to 46, eastern Pennsylvania 1½ to 71, Youngstown 1 point to 29, Buffalo 3 points to 88 and St. Louis 3 points to 91.

In spite of 20 blast furnaces being banked because of strike conditions in steel plants, pig iron production in May totaled 3,544,162 gross tons, compared with 3,400,636 tons in April, a gain of 4.2 per cent. Five months' production this year is 51.5 per cent higher than the comparable period of 1936. Active blast furnaces at the end of May were 17 less than at the end of April, but banking came about near the end of the month, at the beginning of the strikes, and thus had little effect.

Railroad and shipbuilding activities are bringing some important steel tonnages close to placement, especially in the East. Two tankers at 5,000 tons each are up for bids this week and two battleships requiring 11,000 tons of steel each will be placed shortly, one with a private yard. The Reading Co. has placed some underframe business that will require about 2,000 tons and will buy considerable steel for cars to be built in its own shops.

Sale of about 40,000 tons of steel ingots by a Pittsburgh district producer, for export to Japan, at a premium price, indicates strength of world demand for steel. Pig iron sales to Japan this year have been larger than total export sales of pig iron for six years.

April exports of steel, excluding scrap, totaled 243,800 gross tons, the highest since 1921 and believed to be an all-time record for any month since the World War. Scrap exports at 427,886 tons made a new high mark and for four months totaled 1,014,255 tons.

Automobile builders showed the effect of Memorial Day interruption by producing only 110,619 cars last week, a drop of more than 21,000 from the preceding week. General Motors made 43,412 units, about 10,000 less than the week before; Ford, 29,240, about steady, and Chrysler, 23,000, about 5,000 less.

Decline of scrap prices has almost stopped, due to lack of transactions, prices being largely nominal. The steelworks scrap composite declined 10 cents to $17.50, the smallest downward movement for many weeks. The iron and steel composite is 3 cents lower, at $39.86, and the finished steel composite is unchanged, at $61.70.

Lead Supplies Decline.

New York, June 6 (AP).—American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today that lead stocks at smelters and refiners works in the United States declined in April from 213,007 short tons to 200,490 tons. This is the tenth consecutive monthly drop in lead stocks.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Wall Street Stages a Sit-Down; Speculators Withdraw and Investors Wait.

New York, June 6.—Entering the summer in good earnest financial markets on resumption of trading after the holiday showed no pronounced change of trend, and the increase in dullness did more perhaps to dampen spirits than was justified by the character of the developments. Little evidence was given of any considerable amount of liquidation, but it also was plain that most persons found no convincing reasons for buying stocks or bonds.

On balance the position of stocks was virtually unchanged, and that also was true of the Government bond list. Commodities were mixed. The Bureau of Labor Statistics index of wholesale commodity prices for last week was unchanged at 87.4.

Had the stock market been in a weaker condition some of the news of the last week might well have dislodged prices. Strikes at the mills of three large steel companies continued with little sign of settlement. President Roosevelt delivered another of his characteristic calls on one class of the population to hate another class, in an attempt to draw attention away from the serious underestimates of tax collections, and from the patent fact that the Administration is spending far beyond any possible sums it can hope to obtain from individuals and corporations.

Another bearish development, for a time, was a more serious turn taken in the Spanish troubles; but optimism on the point as to whether a general war will break out soon again came to the top. Accompanying the war scare was a revival (inspired as some think) of the rumor of a cut in the price of gold. Metal came out of hoardings in Europe on a grand scale, although not all was thrown on the United States Treasury.

Gold Problem.

Enough gold came this way, nevertheless, to set up another milestone in our gold accumulation since undervaluation of the dollar and the distrust abroad of political and economic conditions in other countries. With the addition this week of $50,000,000 the gold stock topped $12,000,000,000, showing a jump of $1,618,000,000 on the year. Other important central Reserve banks also added to their gold reserves.

Acquisition of gold, unneeded here, is proving a problem to the Treasury, which attempts to prevent the gold imports from increasing the credit base. This is done by borrowing from the banks the money they receive for the delivered gold. That unnecessarily lifts the public debt, as an insurance measure of somewhat doubtful value, inasmuch as the excess reserves already are $860,000,000 and the continued deficit of the Treasury is almost a guaranty of ultimate inflation.

Gold is money, just the same, and always will be regarded as such the world over. Once international trade increases and currencies are stabilized, the disposition of our surplus gold will present no grave problem. Certainly it would be an unwise solution of the matter at this time to cut the price of gold in dollar terms, or for the Treasury to refuse to buy, or for the Government to put gold mining on a quota basis. It is quite unlikely that anything of the sort will be done. e have had enough sort will be done. We have had enough of that sort of management, and that because it was unwise in the first place to attempt to bring off inflation by depressing the dollar in cutting its gold content, it would be even more foolish now, to retrace the ground through deflationary measures. The remedy is the balancing of the budget, and that principally by reduction of expenditures.

That the country is in for some seasonal business recession this summer is now taken for granted, although the sharp decline this week in the operating rate of the steel industry comes from strikes and not from reduced buying. It is still at least an even chance that the decline will go no further than what may be considered seasonal. The quick consumption industries this summer will not have the advantage of the two billion dollar bonus squirted into them last year, but the crop prospects are vastly better and recovery has gone far enough to carry itself for some distance. We probably have reached the stage where further progress is more likely than not to be made, but at a slower pace than that of the past two years.

After nearly a month of vacation from new financing, as old issues went through the process of digestion, the capital market late last week had a bit of revival with a moderate new utility offering that brought a premium. The affair was significant as indicating that dry land could be found. After the June 15 Treasury loan is out of the way more activity in new financing is expected, in view of the settling down of the money market. The Treasury's demand for half a billion in new cash was the lower limit of the predictions, as were the terms so far revealed.

Postal Receipts Set Seven-Year Peak

Boston, Mass., June 6.—While April postal receipts in 50 cities dropped somewhat from March the decline was no more than the seasonal trend. In fact, April receipts were the largest for any April since 1930, and exceeded a year ago by 7½ per cent. For 33 consecutive months postoffice business has exceeded that in the corresponding month of the previous year.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Continue Decline

New York, June 6.—New York City bank stocks eased off slightly during the past week and closed lower, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster.

The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on June 4 amounted to $2,025,909,000, compared with $2,040,911,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $15,002,000, or 0.74 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 3.25 per cent compares with a yield of 3.23 per cent on May 28. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 18.9 times their known earnings, compared with 19.1 times on May 28.

Rise of South Chief Feature Of Recovery

Manufacturing Investments Total Billion Since 1930, Bank Reports.

New York, June 6.—With investment in new manufactures totaling $322,000,000 during 1936 and approximately $1,000,000,000 since 1930, the industrial expansion of the South is an outstanding phenomenon in our recent economic history, according to the Index of the New York Trust Co. It still accounts for only a modest share of the total volume of the products of American industry, the bank review says, but its relative proportion is increasing.

"Recent developments in Birmingham's iron and steel industry," states the Index, "the sustained production of tobacco products in Richmond and Louisville, together with the revival of the distillery industry in the latter city, the remarkable economic growth of Houston, characterized by the increase in its oil refinery capacity, and the growing importance of Dallas as a financial and distributing center for the Texas petroleum industry, stand out prominently in any survey of the South, while of comparable importance are the establishment of new kraft paper and chemical products factories in New Orleans; expanding production in Memphis, signalized by the introduction of automobile tire manufactures, and the increased production of Atlanta's diversified manufactures.

"These growing industries all attest to the economic vitality of this part of the country. With the possibility of newsprint manufacture and still further developments in the chemical field, the South's industrial potentialities are becoming increasingly evident and further progress would appear assured."

Wood Production Decreases in Week

The lumber industry during the week ended May 29, stood at 83 per cent of the 1919 weekly average of production and 79 per cent of 1929 shipments.

Reported new orders dropped slightly below those of the preceding week but were 9 per cent heavier than in corresponding week of 1936. Shipments and production were about the same as the previous week and about 20 per cent above similar weeks of 1936. Reported production is running the heaviest of any weeks in recent years.

National production reported for the week ended May 29 by 9 per cent fewer mills was 3 per cent below the output of the preceding week; shipments were 2 per cent below shipments of that week; new orders were 5 per cent below that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills.

National Income Regains Half Drop

New York, June 6.—The income paid out to the American people in 1936 rose $5,300,000,000 over 1935, to a total of $60,536,000,000, according to a report just issued by the Brookmire Economic Service. This gain retraced 45 per cent of the decline in national income since 1929, and reflects a growth in income since the low year of 1933 of $19,350,000,000.

The Brookmire report further shows that the gain in individual income being in the central manufacturing area, at $650, and the lowest in the south eastern agricultural areas.

In conclusion, the report pointts out that the most favorable areas for increased income in 1937 will probably lie in the central manufacturing, west central agricultural, and eastern manufacturing areas, although there are no areas which now indicate lower incomes in 1937 than in 1936. In consequence, it is believed that all areas should offer better sales opportunities this year than last.

1936 Civil Aircraft Worth $78,148,893

The Air Commerce Bureau reported yesterday the value of civil aircraft and parts produced in the United States last year was $78,148,893. The production of air planes, totaling 3,010, was nearly double the previous year, the bureau said. The planes, exclusive of engines and certain other parts, were valued at $47,531,565.

The 4,295 engines built were valued at $26,383,055 and propellors, parachutes and pontoons at $4,234,273. Five balloons, valued at $38,709, were produced. Aircraft manufacturers employed 30,575 factory and office workers.

Kellogg Re-elected Edison Institute Head

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—C. W. Kellogg, of the Engineers Public Service Co. of New York, was re-elected president of the Edison Electric Institute today.

Vice presidents chosen at the fifth annual convention of the organization were: William E. Mitchell, Georgia Power Co., Atlanta; Paul M. Downing, Pacific Gas & Electric Co., San Francisco; A. M. Kehoe, Consolidated Edison Co., New York, and J. E. Davidson, Nebraska Power Co., Omaha.

Rolling Stock Orders.

New York, June 6 (AP).—Locomotives ordered during the first five months of 1937 were 206, against 108 in the comparable 1936 period. 3,903 freight cars ordered in May brought the 1937 total to 44,562, or about double the 1936 figure for that period. Passenger car orders for the five months totaled 446 against 87 in the 1936 period.

Oil Industry Taxes Average 8 Times Net

Levies Last Year Were 8.62% on Capital Investment.

New York, June 6.—Taxes paid to Federal and State governments by and through the petroleum industry have averaged approximately eight times the industry's earnings in the past decade. In 1936 alone the tax collector received a return in taxes of about 8.62 per cent on the industry's capital investment, or more than three times the industry's own return, and during the past decade has enjoyed a return of about 6.57 per cent, whereas the industry averaged 0.83 per cent.

The situation is revealed in an analisis of the relationship between petroleum taxes and earnings made by the American Petroleum Industries Committee. It was found that the estimated petroleum tax bill of 1936 totaled $1,160,876,256, or approximately three times the 1927 tax bill totalling $398,922,804.

The study indicated that in the six-year period 1931 through 1936, taxes on the industry and its products reached a total of $5,785,661,369, whereas the industry had a net loss of $37,757,824.

In the ten-year period, 1927 through 1936, earnings were estimated at only 12.57 per cent of taxes. Estimated earnings totaled $1,002,017,051, taxes $7,968,417,930.

Particularly heavy losses were sustained in 1931, 1932 and 1933. Improved earnings in 1936 offset these losses to a degree, but still the return on the industry's invested capital in 1936 was estimated only at 2.54 per cent. Earnings of the industry, even in boom years, apparently never were above 5 per cent on invested capital, whereas taxes in 1936 alone amounted to 8.62 per cent, or more than three times 1936 earnings. In 1922 taxes were only 1.65 per cent of the investment. Every year since they have grown, even during the depression.

Even on a company basis, the tax collector appears to have become the largest recipient of the industry's funds, the largest single beneficiary of company operations. Review of the annual reports of 16 representative oil companies discloses that of $3,231,000,604 received by these companies from customers in 1936 the tax collector got $661,492,896, or 20 per cent. Disbursements for taxes exceeded wage payments to employes by margins ranging from 20 per cent to 33 per cent.

Building Activity At Recovery Peak

New York, June 6.—Building activity surged forward in April with renewed vigor after showing less than the usual seasonal expansion in the previous month according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The increase over the March volume was 17.4 per cent as compared with an average seasonal gain of only 5 per cent during the past 12 years. The expansion in April carried building activity to a new high peak for the recovery movement.

Contracts awarded were 29.3 per cent larger than in the corresponding month last year. The increase over last year's volume for the first four months was 32 per cent. During the first four months this year, more building was contracted for than in the entire year of 1933 when building activity reached the low for the depression. New recovery peaks were attained in April by both residential and non-residential contracts.

'Woman' Flees Police as Car Hits House

New York, June 6 (AP).—An automobile with a fashionably dressed "woman" at the wheel led patrolmen a chase through the Bronx today, uprooted a fire hydrant and crashed into a porch, after being fired upon six times. The "woman" lifted "her" skirts and dashed away.

Four hours later, Charles Hitmore, 28, of Yonkers reported his car, bearing the same license number as the wrecked automobile, had been stolen. He was arrested and booked on charges of malicious mischief, disorderly conduct, impersonating a female and leaving the scene of an accident. Police said he had served three prison terms for female impersonation.

Johns-Manville Plan California Factory

New York, June 6 (AP).—Johns-Manville Corporation, will begin work on a $1,000,000 factory to be located in Watson, Calif., a suburb of Los Angeles, Lewis H. Brown, president, announced today.

The new factory will produce rock wool insulation and transite asbestos-pipe, heretofore manufactured only in the company's Midwestern and Eastern plants. Completion is expected early in 1938 and when in operation the factory will employ approximately 300 men, the president declared.

Royal Dutch Dividends 16½ Per Cent in Year

The Hague, June 6 (AP).—Royal Dutch Petroleum Co. declared a final dividend of 11½ per cent, making 16½ per cent for the year as compared with 10½ per cent previously.

Based on the 100 florin par value sub-shares on deposit in New York against which "New York shares" have been issued at the rate of three for one making their par value 33 1-3 florins the dividend would amount to 3.83 florins or $2.11 based on Wednesday's closing foreign exchange.

Imports of Copper Higher in March

New York, June 6 (AP).—The American Bureau of Metal Statistics reported today imports of copper into the United States in April totaled 20,778 short tons against 17,239 tons in March. Imports into Great Britain totaled 33,215 tons against 25,445 tons in the previous month.

Exports of copper from the United States totaled 21,282 short tons in April compared with 23,116 tons in March.

'37 Graduates Hear Sermon At St. John's

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 6.—Members of the graduating class of St. John's College marched in academic procession today to hear the Rev. John K. Mount, jr., rector of Severn Parish, preach their baccalaureate sermon in St. Anne's Protestant Episcopal Church.

Wearing caps and gowns, the approximately 42 graduates, members of the faculty, and Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of the college, formed in front of McDowell Hall and marched to the church.

The Rev. Mr. Mount pointed out that religion like a scientific subject had its practical as well as theoretical side. He stressed the need of living and practicing religion rather than theorizing.

"The men who have amounted to something have applied their knowledge to gain further knowledge," he said. "They have opened new fields, worked with the materials at hand. Make something of your life rather than lie back and cry like a baby."

The college fraternities held open house during the day. A reception was held tonight at the boathouse Tomorrow there will be an informal beach party for the students, and "hobo" dance given by the freshmen in the gymnasium.

He assailed employers who flee New York because of reluctance to meet its present wage scales.

Astronomers Plan Check of Moon's Wayward Course

Astronomers are beginning to worry a bit about the moon and are going to check on that celestial body's position tomorrow from Canton Island, in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, Dr. Harry E. Burton, principal astronomer at the United States Naval Observatory, said last night.

In case you hadn't heard it, the moon is farther off its calculated course today than it has been since 1860, and no scientist knows where the waywardness is going to stop.

Dr. H. Spencer Jones, the English astronomer royal, commented on it yesterday in London. Members of the National Geographic Society-U. S. Navy expedition had it on their minds when they went to Canton Island for the leading astronomical event of 1937—the longest total eclipse of the sun in 12 years.

"The eclipse will be a check on the moon's position," Dr. Burton said. Since the eclipse will last for 3 minutes and 33 seconds, the astronomers may learn enough this time to chart its future course with mathematical accuracy, he thinks.

Co-operation Urged On W. & L. Seniors

Lexington, Va., June 6 (AP).—Bishop Paul Kern, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Durham, N. C., told 163 Washington and Lee seniors today that "capitalism will fail if based upon selfishness, and communism must fail without unselfishness."

Delivering the baccalaureate sermon in historic Lee Chapel, Bishop Kern said "we must develop national selfless devotion to make the economic order the servant of mankind, and the world must be built upon co-operative sharing. You must bring spiritual idealism into the political, business and economic world."

The speaker said America was founded on adventurous-spirited people and our democracy established by their will.

Asking "What is left for your generation?" Bishop Kern answered "as much as faced our fathers, not in the physical world, but in a world more real and dynamic than of spiritual idealism."
